Tobey Leads Close Race For Senate Nomination

Powell, War Veteran With Conservative GOP Backing, Lags In New Hampshire

MANCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 13 (Wednesday) (AP).—Wesley Powell, 34-year-old lawyer-veteran, and Senator Charles W. Tobey were running neck-and-neck early today in the New Hampshire Republican primary for the Senate nomination.

The count in 295 precincts out of 297 in the State was: Powell, 37,270; Tobey, 38,401.

Powell wiped out a 100-vote lead Tobey enjoyed for only a short while, then Tobey surged into the lead again.

The youthful campaigner making his first bid for public office led most of the way. But Tobey went ahead for a short time as industrial city returns came in.

Powell claimed the support of the conservative faction of the GOP in one of the bitterest campaigns in New Hampshire history.

In the first returns, Tobey failed to show strength in small towns he has carried by a wide margin during his long political life.

Tobey also lost the first city wards reporting.

Three wards in Concord and two in Rochester gave Powell 721 votes to 519 for Tobey.

Tobey, who takes pride in being a maverick in politics, waged one of the most vigorous drives of a long career that has seen him running 30 years for public office without defeat.

Powell, even though making his first bid for elective office, is no political novice. He quit as administrative assistant to New Hampshire's senior Senator, Styles Bridges, to make the race. Bridges remained officially neutral in the campaign.

Striking out at Tobey for bolting the GOP leadership on many issues, Powell called him a "Truman Republican." The veteran Tobey replied he has always voted "for the best interests of New Hampshire and all the people regardless of party."

Powell attacked Tobey for his "America first" activities before World War II. But Tobey countered by playing up the endorsement of him as an internationalist by Philip Willkie, son of the late Wendell L. Willkie.

The early turnout indicated the vote might surpass the 50,000 ballots normally cast in a GOP primary. The record is 84,327 cast in the 1938 primary.

Detroit Regains Lead As Yankees Lose to Indians

Detroit sweated out a 3-2 victory over Washington yesterday and regained the lead in the torrid American League pennant race when Cleveland's Luke Easter hit a three-run homer in the ninth to beat the New York Yankees, 8-7, last night.

The loss, after they took a 6-0 lead on an early home run barrage, put the Yanks a half game behind the Tigers.

Shenker Declines Party Post But Political Row Continues

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Morris A. Shenker, St. Louis criminal lawyer, yesterday turned down an appointment to the Democratic National Finance Committee. But the political pot kept boiling.

Shenker's appointment, announced last Friday, brought hot words from Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), a member of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee.

Chairman Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) next suggested Shenker resign the job. Shenker thereupon replied that he was turning down the appointment because "it is conceivable that my acceptance of this position might interfere with the rights of my clients."

His clients have included some of the leading gambling world figures of the Midwest.

Kefauver said that closed the matter and he turned down Wiley's request for a crime committee investigation.

Wiley retorted last night that he was "indeed sorry" Kefauver refused. Then he took some potshots at the Democrats as "the same party which coddled the Pressmans, the Hisses and other individuals with alien political associates." He said the party "also coddles individuals associated—albeit in an entirely legal way—with sinister sub-rosa interests."

The whole affair was keenly embarrassing to the Democrats and nobody was willing to say who suggested the appointment in the first place.

Traffic Light Arouses Ire Of Virginians

New Signal Results In Rush Hour Tie-Ups Across 14th St. Bridge

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

A new traffic light at 14th and D sts. sw. yesterday aroused hundreds of Highway Bridge commuters from Virginia to a fury of protests such as the Department of Vehicles and Traffic and the American Automobile Association have seldom seen.

The offending light, installed Friday, has caused rush-hour bottlenecks which back up traffic across the new bridge as far as the approaches to the Pentagon on the Virginia side.

Complainants said the new light had wiped out the improvement in traffic movement brought about by the new bridge. Others said the congestion this week has been worse than before the new bridge was built.

The Department of Vehicles and Traffic, swamped by some 800 enraged phone calls, acted quickly yesterday to change the timing of the light.

But a group of Department of Agriculture employes are determined that the light should be removed outright and started a petition to that effect. They were joined by members of the AAA.

The controversial signal has a right-turn arrow for northbound cars and trucks following the U. S. 1 truck route, which turns from 14th st. into D st. For part of the time the right-turn arrow is on, through traffic is held up by the light to allow traffic in the southbound lane to turn left into D st.

Wallace Braun, acting director of traffic in the absence of George E. Keneipp, said the blame for the 14th st. troubles should be placed on those motorists who get into the right lane of the northbound highway and then wait for a through signal.

However, by yesterday afternoon he had had the through-arrow signal period extended by 15 seconds and said he hoped that might clear up the trouble. This morning's peak traffic should tell the story.

Braun said the light was installed to give pedestrians a chance to cross 14th st. there and to help motorists coming into 14th st. at D st. from Maine ave. sw.

George P. Hammond, AAA director of safety and education, called the light a "headache"

Conspiracy Charged at Crime Inquiry

Lawyer-Gaming Link Exists in District, 2 Congressmen Say

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

An open conspiracy exists among District lawyers, gamblers and bondsmen, two members of the House subcommittee investigating Washington crime charged yesterday.

The accusations were made after a full day of testimony in which lawyers failed to recognize gambling clients, gamblers were unable to state who paid their legal fees, and a bondsman could not tell who paid him for bonds.

The two Congressmen who made the accusations asked not to be quoted by name.

Lawyers questioned by the committee were Charles E. Ford, H. Clifford Allder, Ford's associate, and James K. Hughes, all members of the unofficial Fifth Street Bar Association.

Six convicted gamblers, five of them from Lorton Reformatory, also testified. The only bondsman to appear was Meyer Weinstein.

The committee also renewed its attack against the city's "after-hours" clubs, calling officers of the Lyre Club, 919 12th st. nw., and the Hide-Away Club, 3135 K st. nw.

Committee members shook their heads in dismay while the audience smiled as Committee Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach tried to pin down each witness.

Swollen Potomac Menace to Boats Moored at Piers

Harbor police last night urged all small boat owners to look after their craft as the rain-swollen wind-pushed Potomac rose almost 3 feet above normal high tide.

Water lapped over the seawall at Hains Point and along King st. in Alexandria. Fairlawn dr. se., from the 11th st. bridge to the Anacostia field house was under water.

Capt. Otha Sanders, harbormaster and commanding officer of the harbor precinct, said small craft moored at wharfs were snapping their lines.

The Weather Bureau explained that the prime reason behind the high tide was a southeast wind that "pushed" the river upstream.

Williams Granted New Trial In Indecent Exposure Case

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Robert S. Williams, jr., 45, convicted of indecently exposing himself before two teen-age girls here, was granted a new trial yesterday by Judge Aubrey B. Fennell.

Simultaneously, the Municipal Court jurist asked the Federal Bureau of Investigation to make an "exhaustive" investigation of the mystery letters in the case. The FBI findings should be used by the court when the retrial is held, said the judge.

After three days of conflicting testimony by handwriting experts as to the letters' authorship, Judge Fennell said he was unable to determine the writer of the two letters "confessing" the crime of which Williams had been convicted.

During that hearing, a Police Department expert charged that Williams' 18-year-old daughter, Evangeline, wrote the letters in order to shield her father. Two defense documents examiners said that she could not have done the writing. Evangeline, a Wilson High School graduate who leaves Sunday for college in Connecticut, denied the charge.

Yanks Open New Attack Above Taegu

Drive Follows Seizing Of Strategic Hill After Bloody Fight Lasting for Hours

TOKYO (Wednesday) Sept. 13 (AP).—United States First Cavalry Division troops opened an assault today against Korean Reds on a hill eight miles north of Taegu. The attack was in the same area where the Americans seized a height last night at heavy cost.

A field dispatch by Associated Press Correspondent Jack Macbeth reported the action at the northwest corner of an otherwise generally quiet 125-mile battle line.

Macbeth's dispatch called the hill "important" but did not otherwise pinpoint it. Last night in describing the fierce fight for Hill 314, he said the First Cavalry was under fire also from Reds atop a nearby hill.

Elsewhere along the 50-mile northern front extending from north of Taegu to the east coast near Red-held Pohang, United Nations forces were "establishing a strong defensive line," United States Eighth Army said today.

At the southern end of the war front, Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton said the U. S. 25th Division easily beat back two light Red attacks before dawn this morning on hill positions near the confluence of the Nam and Naktong Rivers.

The Eighth Army communique accented the comparative lull on the war front by confining its report to Tuesday's actions. The bulk of its brief summary was devoted to the situation in the northern sector.

Its highlights:

1. The U. S. First Cavalry gained due north of Taegu (the hill seizure) but was forced to withdraw in the Sindong vicinity, seven miles to the northwest.

2. South Korean troops still were advancing east of Yongchon, the highway junction 20 miles northeast of Taegu which the Reds held briefly last week.

"The ROK (Republic of Korea) line now extends 12 miles east of the city in force," the communique added. "South Korean forces gained city in force," the communique added. South Korean forces gained from 1 to 5 miles in the area Tuesday, capturing abandoned Communist equipment.

The drive of 130,000 North Koreans ringing the entire front appeared to have bogged down. The Red forces pulled back or regrouped for another crack at the United Nations lines.

With high ground now secured along the highway aproaches to Taegu from the north, Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, Eighth Army commanders, declared:

"The worst is over."

Walker in a statement said that while the enemy still could strike anywhere along the front, "I am now sure we can stop him."

Measure Orders Registration Now, Internment in National Crisis

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate late yesterday approved a far-reaching anti-Red bill wrapping into one package nearly all pending Communist control legislation, including internment of subversives in wartime.

The vote was 70 to 7. The bill, threatened with veto by the President, now goes to conference with the House, which has approved a sweeping Red registration measure of its own.

As finally passed by the Senate following a day of confusing about faces and political floor jockeying, the bill goes beyond the original McCarran version.

A Red "concentration camp" measure, tossed out by Administration adherents as a substitute for the McCarran subversive catch-all, was toned down and made part of the omnibus bill.

The President's Senate floor leader, Senator Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) personally led the fight to make the McCarran bill "tougher," charging its Red registration provisions merely "slapped the Reds on the wrist."

Lucas failed, 45 to 29, in his initial move to substitute the Communist detention plan for the registration provisions of the McCarran bill.

Then Lucas moved to make it part of the McCarran bill. Senators Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), and Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.), whose own catch-all had been roundly denounced by Administration spokesman as unconstitutional and a "smear" on innocent persons, now threw the same charges back at Lucas.

Shouting that the detention bill violated the Constitution and endangered basic freedoms, McCarran charged Democratic leaders were trying merely to insure a veto.

The Senate voted down the second Lucas proposal, but only by a margin of 37 to 35. A vote recapitulation failed to upset the count. Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) moved to reconsider the vote and Democratic leaders got busy on the phones to muster enough votes to change the result.

While the vote round-up was going on, proponents of the McCarran bill sought a way to get off the political hot spot. Having charged that the Red detention bill violated constitutional guarantees, they quickly drew up an amendment to make Communist internment "constitutional."

So when the vote came on "reconsidering" the earlier tally by which the Senate rejected Lucas' Red detention move, there wasn't a single objection.

McCarran promptly took the floor with his "constitutionalized" version of the plan to jail Reds in wartime. Instead of objecting to it, Lucas accepted the modified amendment as his own. The Senate adopted it by voice vote.

In its modified form the amendment would authorize the Attorney General to intern Communists and other potential saboteurs only in time of war, invasion or insurrection.

Big 3 Gather, Views Divided By Slight Gap

Germany Is Main Area Of Disagreement As Momentous Talks Begin

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Only a narrow gap appeared to separate the Foreign Ministers of the United States, Britain and France today as they begin a series of momentous meetings here.

Germany was the main area of disagreement; Asia in general, and Formosa in particular, were other fields in which the Big Three did not yet see eye to eye. But all three delegations were confident that a relatively small amount of give and take could produce agreement on the important issues.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain, who has strong views on Germany and Asia, was in a confident yet conciliatory mood when he arrived on the Queen Mary this morning.

"We want to work out very definite proposals," he told reporters, "but these must come as the result of mutual discussion."

American and French spokesmen likewise emphasized that their delegations had come here to negotiate, not to lay down the law. And it was symbolic of the atmosphere here that the three ministers met for their first two hours this afternoon like old friends, with only a single adviser apiece to take notes, and without the usual phalanx of assistants flanking them at the conference table.

It was clear even before they met that the three governments were agreed on (1) organizing a

Howl of Protest Greets Beer Ban For Korean GIs

Somewhere in Korea, Sept. 12 (AP).—A howl of protest from the American front lines today greeted the Army's ban on free beer for combat troops.

Combat men have been receiving a ration of one small tin of beer daily. The Army said it acted because of adverse public opinion in the United States.

Henceforth beer will be available only to soldiers with change jingling in their pockets or with comrades free to make shopping trips behind the lines.

Maj. J. R. Woodbridge of Lynchburg, Va., defended the order:

"I love beer as much as anyone. But that space in ships can be used for ammunition and essential war materiel."

Acheson Says German Aid Is Needed

Secretary Stressed Urgency of Plan To Senate Group

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Dean Acheson has told Congress that German manpower and resources must be included in any effective, long-range Western European defense plan.

His statement—made six weeks ago before a closed Senate committee session and just released—stressed the "urgency" of working out such a plan with other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It must have the "enthusiastic" support of the French, Germans and other Western Europeans, he said.

Acheson now is meeting in New York with the British and French Foreign Ministers. German rearmament is one of the major subjects under discussion.

The Secretary of State's testimony on the subject before the Senate Appropriations Committee August 30, expressed confidence that a plan to bring western Germany's resources and men into the joint Western European defense forces can be arranged.

Johnson Also Testified

Louis Johnson, who resigned as Secretary of Defense yesterday, testified at the same time on the military aspects of Western European defense. He appeared to disagree with Acheson's statement that the defense plans would not be "effective" without German manpower.

"The arrangements will be effective without that power," he said. "The German manpower would be in addition."

When Senators challenged the two Secretaries as being in conflict, Johnson denied this. Acheson said he did not think he was in disagreement with the Defense chief, and any way would not "get into the military field."

"What I am trying to point out," he added, "is that over a period of time if you do not solve the proper need of the German people for security and for participation in the western European scheme you will have a situation which will then cause so much trouble that your whole plan will not be effective."

In addition to Acheson's testimony, the published record of the committee hearings on the 16-billion-dollar supplemental defense bill disclosed that many American Communists have been going

Ousting Is Laid To Criticism of Acheson Policies; Early Also Quits

(Letter and Truman reply, P. 6)

President Truman fired Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson from his Cabinet late yesterday and asked Gen. George C. Marshall to take his place.

General Marshall, who is 69, agreed to serve, but Congress will have to amend the National Security Act if he is to be eligible. As the law stands, no person can serve as Secretary of Defense who has been on active duty with the armed forces within ten years.

The Cabinet shakeup, which Mr. Truman said came in "terribly regrettable circumstances," was announced at the White House at 6:35 p. m. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross gave out copies of Secretary Johnson's letter of resignation and Mr. Truman's letter accepting it as of September 19.

The letters did not deal directly with the row in Mr. Truman's official family.

Criticism of Acheson Blamed

What led the President to wield the ax on Johnson, associates said, was Johnson's behind-the-scenes criticism of Secretary of State Dean Acheson, a vendetta that has been the talk of Washington since the outbreak of war in Korea.

Some Republicans in Congress said that "the wrong man resigned," and renewed demands for the ousting of Secretary Acheson.

It was reported that Mr. Truman and General Marshall wanted John J. McCloy, now American High Commissioner for Germany, to take over the job of Deputy Secretary of Defense, a post from which Stephen T. Early is resigning at the end of this month.

Friends of McCloy indicated, however, that he felt it was his duty to remain on his "hot spot" in Germany, where one of the big issues now is the rearming of West Germans. McCloy served as Assistant Secretary of War in World War II and later as president of the World Bank.

Johnson Acquired "Enemies"

Secretary Johnson, in his letter of resignation, said he had acquired "more enemies than friends" in performing his duties at the Pentagon. He said that the country should have a Secretary of Defense who does not suffer under that handicap, and he recommended General Marshall for the job.

Johnson visited the White House twice yesterday, leaving by a side door on both occasions.

Reporters were out on the street waiting for him when he emerged the second time, following a Cabinet meeting. He seemed dejected.

Rail Stocks Reach 19-Year High In Rising Market

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP).—Railroad stocks climbed to a 19-year high in a rising market today.

Gains ranged from an extreme of $3.75 a share for high-priced Santa Fe.

The market as a whole, measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, matched its 1950 peak, which in turn was tops since 1946.

Steels, autos and oils shared the honors with rails.

Some favorite stocks included New York Central, Seaboard Air Line, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Southern Railway, Pennsylvania, United States Steel, Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Standard Oil (N. J.) and Gulf Oil.

Senior Partner in District Firm

Spencer Gordon, Noted Lawyer And Civic Figure, Dead at 63

Spencer Gordon, a noted trial attorney who has been described by his associates as "a lawyer's lawyer," died yesterday at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

The Washington attorney was 63. He had been a patient at the Baltimore hospital since July 19.

Mr. Gordon was a senior partner in the firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, O'Brien & Shorb. He joined the firm in 1919, when it was Covington & Burling.

The silver-haired attorney was considered by members of his profession to be an outstanding trial lawyer.

He had represented The Washington Post since 1933. He was regarded nationally as a leading authority on the law of libel.

Before his last illness, he successfully defeated a claim brought by the Remington Rand Corp. against Interhandel, a Swiss corporation formerly known as I. G. Chemie. The claim, which involved 25 million dollars in stock, was decided in District Court in the favor of the Swiss concern which had retained the services of Mr. Gordon's firm. The decision has since been taken to the Court of Appeals.

Police Reserve Corps Approved By District Commissioners

By Richard L. Lyons

District Commissioners yesterday authorized Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett to train a police reserve corps. Barrett said he would start recruiting in a week or so.

The force ultimately will number between 4000 and 5000 men, Barrett said, and will be under the administrative control of Lieut. Francis G. Pilkerton. Barrett has designated Pilkerton an acting captain for the job.

Barrett said Pilkerton will also act as liaison man between the police department and District civil defense headquarters—a job formerly held by the District's acting civil defense director, John E. Fondahl. Pilkerton, 49, has been a policeman for 21 years, and has been stationed at No. 11 Precinct since 1946.

Primary purpose of the reserve police force will be to aid in the civil defense of Washington, Barrett said. But under the order approved by the Commissioners yesterday, it could be used for a number of purposes.

The Commissioners acted by adding two clauses to an order they had adopted two years ago

Maine GOP Wins Sweep In Election

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12 (AP).—Three Republican members of Congress who berated the Truman administration for "inviting" war in Korea were reelected yesterday.

The eighth straight sweep of major Maine offices also carried Gov. Frederick G. Payne to a second term.

Even though Maine's reputation as a weathervane State withered in the 30's, the election was watched for clues to November results in the other 47 States.

Miss Lucia M. Cormier, Democratic national committeewoman, gave Representative Robert Hale the fright of his political life.

Hale's margin in the First District was 7200—the narrowest he's had in winning five consecutive terms.

Representative Frank Fellows was returned to a sixth term in the Third District, defeating John V. Keenan (D.) almost two to one.

Charles P. Nelson, Maine's freshman congressman, was a four to three winner over John J. Maloney, jr., (D.) in the Second District.

Payne had a margin of 50,000 over Earl S. Grant (D.). A third gubernatorial candidate, States-Righter Leland B. Currier, was a negligible factor.

Percentagewise he also fell off —61 percent compared to 65 two years ago. In the last off-year, however, a Republican governor also polled 61 percent—in 1946.

Gubernatorial campaigning was at the state level. But the congress members hammered away at one issue—how the Truman Administration has handled Asiatic problems.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 12 (AP).—State Auditor Ana Frohmiller, the first woman to seek the Arizona governorship, took an early lead over Gov. Dan E. Garvey in the Democratic primary tonight.

With only 10 complete precincts and 15 incomplete out of 481, Mrs. Frohmiller, auditor for almost 24 years, had 1998 to 1346 for Garvey, who was running second.

Veteran United States Senator Carl Hayden, Democrat, took a 3-1 early lead over his competitors.

Senator Hayden had 1277 to 400 for Cecil Miller, Tolleson Rancher, his nearest rival.

John R. Murdock, United States Representative from the First Arizona Congressional District, was unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

Harold A. Patten, representative of the other Congressional district, had an early 2-1 lead over his opponent in the Democratic vote.

Republican candidates for the major offices were unopposed in the primary. Howard Pyle, Phonix radio executive, was the gubernatorial nominee. Bruce Brockett, Rancher from Rimrock, seeks the Senate seat, Carl W. Divelbiss, Phoenix attorney, is running for the United States congressional seat from District One and John H. Curnutte, Winslow railroad man, from District Two.

Trailing Mrs. Frohmiller and Garvey in the early voting for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination were Richard F. Harless, former Representative in Congress; Jim Smith, rancher; Ralph Watkins, Buckeye businessman; and Howard Sprouse, retired mining main.

Engel Is Running Fourth In Michigan Contest

DETROIT, Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Murky skies held down the vote today in the Michigan primary election as three of the State's representatives in Congress faced even-odds fights and five mes battled for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

Three other top congressional contests were held in the second, ninth and sixteenth districts, where vacancies resulted from death or retirement of the incumbents.

Democratic Gov. G. Mennen Williams was unopposed for renomination. If re-elected in November, Williams would be the first Democratic Governor to serve two terms since 1914.

Republican candidates for the post were former Rep. Albert J. Engel, Secretary of State Fred M. Alger jr., former Gov. Harry F. Kelly, former Lieut. Gov. Eugene C. Keyes and Mayor Thomas S. Leith of Brighton. Although Leith was considered the weakest of the five, all were expected to run a close race.

With 138 of the State's 4359 precincts reporting, Kelly led with 5025 votes, followed by Alger with 4019, Keyes with 3144, Engel with 1416 and Leith with 352.

Engel resigned from his ninth district congressional seat to run for Governor.

Republican Rep. Roy Woodruff, who has been in Congress since 1918, is opposed by his hometown mayor, Elford Cederberg of Bay City.

Prouty and Emerson Are Leading in Vermont

MONTPELIER, Vt., Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Gov. Harold J. Arthur trailed former House Speaker Winston L. Prouty by a 3 to 2 margin tonight in the race for the Republican nomination to Vermont's lone Congressional seat.

Early returns from 30 of 246 cities and towns gave prouty a total of 6823 votes to 4437 for Arthur. George M. Abbott of Burlington and Chester M. Way of Middlebury trailed badly and were out of the contest.

The contest for the Republican nomination for governor was a close race between former Lieut. Gov. Lee Emerson with 3845 votes and House Speaker J. Harold Stacey with 3666. Peter A. Bove, State Liquor Control Board chairman, was third with 1945.

Peterson Takes Lead Over Hulsted in Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 12 (AP).—Harry H. Peterson, former Supreme Court justice, grabbed an early lead over Charles Halsted of Brainerd in the Minnesota primary election contest for the Democratic-Farmer-Labor nomination for governor.

Returns from 41 of the State's 3759 precincts gave Peterson 2216 votes to 867 for Halsted. Bulk of the returns however, came from St. Paul where Peterson was acknowledged to have strong Labor support. Peterson was the convention endorsee.

As expected, Governor Youngdahl was far out in front for the Republican nomination. Forty-one precincts gave him 2919 votes to 122 for Walter Olson, his nearest competitor.

Chance Slight For Congress To Quit Soon

Congressional leaders talked wistfully yesterday of recess or adjournment by Saturday night following a legislative huddle at the White House but privately conceded the chances are mighty bleak.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) and Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said the President left the decision up to Congress whether to recess or adjourn after pending emergency measures are cleared.

Only catch is, there's still a tall stack of emergency business to clean up, namely:

House-Senate conference action on far-reaching anti-subversive legislation, which only passed the Senate yesterday, and may be returned to Congress via veto.

Final clearance of the big $4,508,000,000 emergency tax bill, which the House hasn't yet sent to conference. An independent House move to add an excess profits tax to it may further delay the bill.

Final approval of the 16 billion dollars rearmament appropriations bill, which has passed the House but not the Senate.

A Senate leadership attempt to pass the House-approved Hawaii and Alaska statehood bills. Leaders may settle for making them "unfinished business," to be considered when Congress returns from recess, probably in mid-November.

Appointment of Gen. George C. Marshall as Secretary of Defense to succeed Louis Johnson yesterday added a new emergency item, requiring passage of a special law to make him eligible and Senate confirmation.

Ten Red Officials Carry Bail Appeal To Supreme Court

Ten of the 11 Communists convicted of conspiracy last October in New York asked Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson yesterday to let them remain free on bail, despite a court order that would send them to prison.

Their bail was revoked by the Second United States Circuit Court of Appeals last month on motion of the Government. Federal attorneys said the Communists had continued to advocate violent overthrow of the Government and are "dangerous to public welfare."

Jackson administers the second circuit, so questions as to bail in this area may be appealed to him. He said he will hold closed hearing in a few days with attorneys on both sides.

Senate Approval of O'Dwyer For Mexico Post Held Certain

NYNT News Service

Senate confirmation of former Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York City as Ambassador to Mexico seemed assured yesterday after he turned aside as "merely politics" charges raised against him during a three-hour secret hearing of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), the committee chairman, predicted flatly that O'Dwyer's appointment to this diplomatic post would be approved overwhelmingly by the committee and that the Senate would confirm him in like fashion.

A final committee vote was delayed, however, when Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), who led the attack against him, indicated he might like to ask a few more questions of the Irish immigrant who rose from a policeman to Mayor of New York.

Most of the charges concerned the 60-year-old O'Dwyer's record as Kings County district attorney before he was elected mayor. They were presented to the committee by the lone witness against him, Henry V. Poor, Republican candidate for the House against Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., in New York's Twentieth Congressional District.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) apparently summed up the attitude of the committee's democratic majority when he brushed aside the charges as "a little political shenanigans."

Senator Connally, making no effort to conceal his contempt for the attack on O'Dwyer, forecast that not more than two or three of the committee's 13 members would vote against his confirmation.

He also tossed caustic barbs at two witnesses who demanded a hearing on his confirmation and then failed to appear to testify—Clendenin J. Ryan, an old political foe of O'Dwyer, and Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.).

Faster Rail Traffic Ordered

By The Associated Press

The Government yesterday spurred defense mobilization with an order to quicken the Nation's railroad freight traffic, and set a 24-hour limit on the turn around of freight cars ready to move.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, in issuing the order, sharply criticized delays in loading and unloading freight.

It said the action was taken "to promote the National Defense." In other defense moves:

1. Officials said an anti-hoarding order on steel, copper, tin, aluminum and other key materials may be expected before the end of this week.

2. The Interior Department began setting up a new agency—tentatively called the Minerals and Energy Administration (MEA)—to prepare for possible emergency use of priorities and allocations of petroleum, gas, coal and electric power.

The new organization is expected to start functioning, at least on a standby basis, within two weeks.

Government experts generally agreed that months will probably elapse before consumers even begin to feel the pinch of war production orders — and that the squeeze will be much less servere than in the last war.

Area Doctors Spurn Chance to Volunteer

Fail Mental Tests

Rate of Draft Rejects Here Is 'Alarming'

Washington men called by the Selective Service System are being rejected at an "alarming rate" for failure to pass the Army's mental qualification tests, says Frank D. Norton, deputy director of the District draft.

He said yesterday that one out of three rejections here is due to the inability of selectees to pass intelligence exams.

During the past five weeks, Norton said, 1414 local draftees, between the ages of 25 and 23, have undergone preinduction examination. Of these, 848 have been rejected. Thus the overall rejection rate here is around 60 percent, the national average.

Of the 848 rejected, 282—or 32 percent—have been refused induction for failure to pass the mental qualification test, more than double the national average of 15.2 percent, as announced Monday by Representative Paul J. Kilday (D., Tex.), member of the House Armed Services Committee.

Deputy Draft Chief Norton, in releasing the figure, said he was "very much disturbed" over the mental rejection rate.

"Some action should be taken by the proper authorities to adjust the test standards so as to permit induction of these men, most of whom are well capable of earning a living in civilian life," Norton urged.

"These men can and should do a job in the military service."

Hershey Voices Concern

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System, has publicly voiced concern over the mental qualification tests. Protest have also been made recently by Col. Asher W. Harman, director of the Virginia draft where three out of four rejections are due to the mental tests.

Fifty-nine Washington draftees will be inducted today at Arlington Farms.

The doctor's draft law, signed by the President last Saturday, has stimulated few voluntary enlistments thus far—at least in this Second Army area, it was revealed yesterday.

Less than a "baker's dozen" of medical men have applied for active military duty in this area—which includes the District, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, and Kentucky—during the past two days in order to escape the draft, according to Col. Harold W. Glattly, Second Army surgeon at Fort Meade, Md.

The Army Surgeon General's office here reported that there hasn't been time enough elapsed since the President spoke to determine what doctors will do. Even so, the indications are obvious that there's not going to be any rush on the part of medical men to get into the armed forces.

Pentagon Optimistic

There's been a feeling at the Pentagon that there'd be little or no necessity to make actual use of the draft law. The attitude has been that the doctors would "volunteer" to escape the draft, and thereby get the $100-a-month bonus given such volunteers.

A top Army medical officer commented yesterday, however, that he suspects the doctors liable for the draft are simply "sweating it out" on the chance they may not be called.

During the past month, there have been a few volunteers from among the medical men trained at Government expense during World War II, but served little or no time in the armed forces. Of these, 46 have been processed for commission, and 59 others are being processed.

On the basis of these volunteers, and in hopes that the draft will bring an onrush of more "volunteers," the Army yesterday reduced its quota for reserve medical officers.

Reserve Quota Cut

Nationally, the reserve quota has been cut from 734 to 364; in the Second Army area, from 143 to 68; in the District, from 17 to 7. Maryland's new quota is 4; Virginia's is 6.

The call for dentists also has been reduced, from 343 to 126. This is expected to reduce the quotas for the District and the two adjacent States to two each.

Montevideo Crippled By Strike of 150,000

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 12 (U.P.).—A sympathy strike by 150,000 workers crippled Montevideo today, hushing the roar of traffic on the downtown streets of the Uruguayan capital.

No newspapers were published. Buses, trolleys and taxis ground to a stop at one minute past midnight, as the 24-hour work stoppage got under way. The strike was called to support the demands of 6000 metal workers, on strike for weeks, for immediate payment of a retroactive wage award.

Army Clamps Strict Security On Maneuvers

HEIDELBERG, Germany, Sept. 12 (U.P.).—The United States Army today clamped "wartime security" on its fall maneuvers here to prevent Communist agents from gathering information about American defensive tactics for a "potential enemy."

[Allied officials disclosed that four high-ranking Spanish army officers had joined Atlantic Pact observers at troop maneuvers now going on here, the Associated Press reported. It is the first time since the war that Spanish military observers have been admitted to American training exercises.]

An Army spokesman said extraordinary security measures had been ordered. He gave no details, saying the precautions were "classified information."

He said, however, that the measures were a real safeguard against a genuine spy threat—not a part of the simulated battle atmosphere of the war games.

The announcement came as mock "enemy" agents — some speaking Russian—swarmed through the lines of the defending maneuver army to blow up mythical bridges and sabotage Army operations.

The defense forces had been driven back to the east bank of the Rhine River by six tank-led "aggressor" divisions. Infiltration threatened to drive the defending troops back to the west bank of the Rhine.

Captured "enemy" agents were briefed to tell their stores in Russian, German, Polish or French if they were questioned properly by their GI captors.

Korean Woman Joins Marines

A NEW CAREER—Signing up for the Marine Corps yesterday was Verna Kim (left), 21-year-old Korean woman living here at the International Student House. Miss Kim was born in Hawaii, where her parents immigrated from Seoul, fallen South Korean capital, in the 20s. Also enlisting in the corps yesterday were Miss Grace Daniel, 27, of 443 6th st. sw. (center) and Miss Virginia Borinski, 26, of 1730 Massachusetts ave. nw (right)

Korean Girl Is Enlisted In Marines

A Korean woman, who wants to make a career in the Marine Corps, is going to get a chance to do it.

Yesterday she was accepted at the Marine Corps recruiting station here, and last night started on her way to Parris Island, S. C., accompanied by two other women recruits, to begin training.

She is Verna Kim, 21, who for the past three years has been making her home at the International Student House here while attending Central High School. She also has attended schools in Massachusetts, including Boston University.

Native of Hawaii

Miss Kim is a native of Hawaii. Her parents migrated there from Seoul, Korea, in the twenties, she said. Mrs. Kim is now a real property manager. The girl's father is dead.

Miss Kim's traveling companions on her first day of service were Miss Grace Daniel, 27, of 443 6th st. sw., and Miss Virginia Borinski, 26, of 1730 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Miss Daniel, a native of Kentucky, has been in Washington for eight years as a statistical clerk at the Labor Department. She said she had always wanted to go in the Marine Corps "because of its high standards." She hopes to continue statistical work.

"Besides," she said, "I can retire at 47. Under Civil Service I would have to be 62."

Miss Borinski, a native of West Point, Va., has been working here for the U. S. Public Health Service as secretary to the regional medical director.

Two Men Enlisted

Besides the three women, the Marine recruiting station enlisted two men. Another was accepted for later processing, while 15 other applicants were rejected.

The Army-Air Force main recruiting station at Arlington Farms had a busy day yesterday, with 63 applicants. Fourteen were sworn in for the Air Force, 13 for the Army, while 20 others were accepted for enlistment today.

In Virginia, about 200 members of the Army's Organized Reserve face recalls to active duty beginning September 20, the Virginia Military District office announced.

The Reservists will be assigned to the Eleventh Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

General's Son From District Dies in Action

Lieut. Munro Magruder, 23, son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. John Magruder, 1061 Thomas Jefferson st. nw., has been killed in action in Korea.

Lieut. Magruder

He is the tenth Washington area man to be killed since the Korean conflict began. To date 33 have been wounded, one injured and 16 are missing in action.

Lieutenant Magruder, a 1949 graduate of West Point, was killed on September 3—about a week after landing in Korea. His parents received official notification Monday. He was serving with the First Cavalry Division.

Born in Peiping, China, Magruder attended St. Albans School here for six years. He was an outstanding student and athlete, receiving the Thomas Hyde Medal as the best all-around boy in his class at his commencement in 1944. He received varsity letters for basketball and football and, in his senior year, captained the varsity baseball team.

Magruder's parents met in China. His father was military attache at Peiping and his mother was daughter of the then Minister to China. General Magruder is now a consultant in the office of the Secretary of Defense.

After his graduation from St. Albans, Lieutenant Magruder served as a seaman first class in the Navy for a year. He then entered West Point from which he graduated in 1949.

Lieutenant Magruder served at Fort Riley, Kans., and Fort Benning, Ga., after receiving his commission. In July he married Miss Nina Garner of Reno, Nev.

Besides his parents and wife, he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Robert E. O'Brien, jr., 219 N. Wayne st., Arlington, and a brother, Malcom Magruder of the Thomas Jefferson st. address.

Job Rise Is Reported Throughout Nation

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Unemployment has decreased on a Nation-wide scale, the Labor Department's Bureau of Employment Security reported yesterday.

Since last May, 99 major cities have shown a decline in unemployment, 130 cities out of 143 have shown an increase in employment, as a result of the continuing demand for civilian goods and services, and to a lesser extent the growing manpower needs of the defense program.

"E" areas—in which 12 percent or more of the labor force is unable to find work—declined from 22 to 14 in July. Among the areas still in need of work are the city of Cumberland, and Garrett County, Md. Early this year, there were 43 "E" areas.

Bureau Director Robert C. Goodwin reported that while hiring to meet defense production contracts was only beginning to gather momentum in late July and early August, employment rose in almost all phases of business and industry. Production scheduled for existing contracts were speeded up in some areas to clear the way for new contracts.

There was a general rush of consumer buying following the news of hostilities in Korea, Goodwin said. In a few areas, the effect on retail trade was so marked that the usual seasonal employment decline was allayed or even reversed. In the construction industry, already at boom levels, builders hastened to get work underway, in advance of possible Government limitations on home financing and restrictions on material.

Goodwin said there were growing reports of labor shortages in the major industrial areas. The need is particularly for skilled mechanics and metalworkers. Many States reported shortages of bricklayers and carpenters.

Among the critical occupations, the principal shortages reported were for engineers, professional nurses, tool designers, machinists and tool and die makers.

heavy air strikes Monday and Tuesday about 1000 First Cavalrymen slugged their way up rocky Hill 314 against withering fire from North Koreans on the crest and on a nearby slope.

AP Correspondent Jack Macbeth with the advancing cavalrymen told how the assault stalled two-thirds of the way up, after advancing for five bitter hours.

North Koreans hurled a barrage of mortar and machinegun fire into the face of the oncoming Americans. Red artillery pounded the rear and set fire to the village of Chilgok, five air miles north of Taegu.

At nightfall Tuesday, in spite of heavy casualties, the intrepid cavalrymen stormed the hill crest.

Besides controls of the hill objective the Allied defenders of Taegu secured "all high ground" commanding the Tabu-to-Taegu roadway, a spokesman for General MacArthur's headquarters reported.

South Koreans Also Advance

South Korean troops of the First Republican Division attacked west of the First Cavalry and took high ground which firmly linked with the cavalry's left flank.

American war planes Tuesday closely supported the ground action along the entire front. They concentrated most of their 335 sorties along the northern front. Eleven Red tanks were destroyed or damaged. The bag also included trucks, gun emplacements and fuel depots.

In flights north of the 38th parallel B-29's walloped the Kan arsenal, 10 miles north of the Communist capital of Pyongyang. Allied planes also located five new Yak fighters on a field 60 miles north of Seoul, destroyed three of them and damaged a fourth.

General MacArthur's war summary early Wednesday said South Korean and United States Twenty-fourth Division troops in the northeast sector continued to advance Tuesday, capturing "large quantities" of Red equipment and arms.

Hundreds of Reds in Flight

Associated Press Correspondent Bem Price in a flight over this sector said "hundreds" of Communist troops were spotted in flight near the Communist-held town of Angang, eight miles southwest of the burned-out port of Pohang on the east coast.

A rundown on the fighting fronts, based on Eighth Army headquarters spokesman and field dispatches, gave this picture:

Northeast: South Korean Eighth Division troops advanced west an estimated five miles along the Yongchon-Angang road and cleared it to a point only six miles east of Angang. Their two-day drive gained 10 miles. The situation "improved tremendously" according to an Eighth Army spokesman. Correspondent Price reported a C-47 transport plane landed on isolated Pohang airstrip within range of Communist mortar fire to evacuate American wounded. The plane took off without an enemy shot being fired.

Allies Gain Near Yongchon

North sector: In the South Korean second corps area near Yongchon, elements of the corps advanced about one and one-quarter miles after wiping out an enemy force of undisclosed size.

Northwest sector: On the First Cavalry Division front, the west and center were comparatively quiet except for some close quarter fighting in the middle of the center sector. On the right an American battalion captured Hill 314.

Western (Naktong River) front: North Koreans were building up their forces on the east bank bridgehead at Hyonpung, 17 miles southwest of Taegu in the British sector.

Williams Gets Another Trial

the judge's decision meant a new chance to vindicate himself. Since two teen-age girls, in March, identified him as the man who exposed himself to them near American University, the 45-year-old Williams has persistently declared his innocence.

With defense attorneys acknowledging that the girls made "good witnesses," Judge Fennell in April found Williams guilty. But after the letters appeared, sentencing was repeatedly postponed.

Both letters in the same handwriting sent to Prosecutor Clark F. King, admitted the crime. Also, King on three occasions was telephoned by a man who admitted the writing but would not identify himself despite promises of immunity.

King took the witness stand yesterday to tell of the telephone conversations. He said that the caller claimed to be a resident of Chevy Chase, Md.

King said the caller had the "voice of a young man, the kind of man you'd expect to be calling his girl friend."

In arguing for a new trial on the ground that the letters were newly discovered evidence, defense attorney Paul R. Connolly said that Williams was "not a stumblebum off the streets," but a "reputable citizen with a fine record."

"What is happening here," said Connolly, "is happening to a person who has every reason in the world to be protected. If there is a mistake in this case, what an awful tragedy is happening to a fine man."

Before making his ruling, Judge Fennell said:

"The court is of the view that the writer of the letter should be identified, that all persons connected with the letters should be identified."

15-Month-Old Boy Is Rescued From Abandoned Well

RAINIER, Ore., Sept. 12 (AP).—A 15-months'-old boy who fell feet first into a dry abandoned well under his home was rescued tonight.

Rescuers who could hear Ronald Mysinger cry as they dug along side of the12-foot deep well pulled the boy from the hole three hours after he tumbled in while playing.

A rescue worker at the scene said the well was under the V. M. Mysinger house.

Mrs. Mysinger said Ronald was playing with other little boys when he vanished. She searched for him and finally heard his cries. She said nobody knew the abandoned well was there.

Letter by Johnson And Truman's Reply

The text of Secretary of Defense Johnson's letter of resignation and President Truman's reply:

"My Dear Mr. President:

"I have today presented to you the unanimous recommendations of the joint secretaries, the joint chiefs of staff and myself from the rearmament of the United States in concert with the rearmament programs of the other free nations. The completion of these unanimous recommendations marks a milestone in our work for the security of the United States and the peace of the world.

"When I undertook to serve as Secretary of Defense, at your request and that of Secretary Forrestal, I remarked to you privately and also remarked publicly that it was inevitable, in the conscientious performance of my duties as Secretary of Defense, that I would make more enemies than friends. Somewhat ruefully, I now admit, I was right.

"The unification of the armed forces has been accomplished in great degree. If it had not been accomplished we would not have been able to deploy our forces on a fighting front more than 5000 miles from our homeland as speedily as the three services have accomplished that unexpected task.

"I am grateful to you for the support you have always given me, in my attempts to bring about unification of the services and in my work to establish alertness without waste or duplication in the Department of Defense.

"Under normal conditions, the fact that I have made so many enemies would not concern me too greatly, for I could take comfort in the thought that I have made them in a good cause. But today, when American boys are laying down their lives in the cause of our national security and world peace, it seems to me that the country should have a Secretary of Defense who does not suffer under the handicap of the enemies I have acquired during the 18 months I have served as a member of your Cabinet.

"Accordingly, it is my recommendation that, at your earliest convenience, you accept the resignation which I tender herewith, and name as my successor a man of such stature that the very act of naming him to be Secretary of Defense will promote national and international unity. Such a man, in my opinion, is General George Marshall—and I recommend his name to your thoughtful attention.

"I recognize, of course, that many will argue that one of our great generals should not be Secretary of Defense. I do not believe that this argument has validity in the case of General Marshall, who has already rendered distinguished service to his country, in a civilian capacity, as Secretary of State. I recognize also that an amendment to the National Security Act will be necessary, in order to make it legally permissible for General Marshall to serve as Secretary of Defense—but I believe that Congress will speedily amend the law in General Marshall's case, if you should so recommend.

"General Marshall, more than any other individual I can think of, would be an inspiration to the people of the United States and to our Allies. Moreover, he is a man who would assure that we would mobilize our forces speedily and that in doing so we would get a dollar's worth of defense for every dollar we spend. I know that you agree with me as to the continuing importance of this latter consideration.

"In my judgment, it is more essential today than ever before that the program for eliminating waste in the Defense Department be continued, as we proceed to build up strength.

"I want to express to you once more my deep appreciation for the understanding, cooperation, and support you have always given me. I am and shall always be grateful.

"Sincerely yours,
LOUIS JOHNSON."

President Truman's reply:

"My Dear Lou:

"I have just read your letter.

"It is clear to me that in writing it you have been actuated by motives of the highest patriotism, and I salute you. In the terribly regrettable circumstances which have arisen, I feel that I must concur in your judgment and accept your proffered resignation as Secretary of Defense, effective at the close of business on September 19, 1950.

"The manner in which you have carried out the purpose of the National Security Act testifies to your high administrative skill and your devotion to the public welfare. The success of your efforts toward the unification of our armed services should be an abiding satisfaction to you, as it is to me. The country is in debt to you for your pioneering achievement in a field fraught with the greatest difficulties. Thanks in great part to your efforts, we build our national defense of the future on a solid foundation.

"Your recommendation of General Marshall as your successor betokens the same spirit of patriotism as the rest of your letter. I shall propose at once the legislation necessary to make it effective.

"I shall feel free to continue to call upon you for advice.

"With my warm personal regards, my thanks again for your distinguished services, and my best wishes, I am "Very sincerely yours,

"HARRY S. TRUMAN."

Hindu-Moslem Warfare May Recur, Nehru Says

NEW DELHI, Inda, Sept. 12. (U.P.). Prime Minister Pandit Jawa-Harlal Nehru today warned against the possibility of renewed Hindu-Moslem communal fighting in India.

He sounded the warning in a statement commenting on the recent election of Purshotamdas Tandon, a former speaker of the United Provinces Legislative Assembly and an extreme Hindu Nationalist, as president of the Indian National Congress.

Senators Laud Selection of Gen. Marshall

By The Associated Press

Congressional leaders promised speedy action yesterday to clear the way for the appointment of Gen. George C. Marshall as Secretary of Defense to succeed Louis Johnson.

Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) said the Senate Armed Services Committee will move immediately to make it possible for Marshall to serve in the post. This will require modification of the law which says that only a civilian can serve as Secretary of Defense. Marshall still has five-star military status as a general of the Army.

There appeared little doubt that Marshall's appointment to succeed Johnson would get speedy Senate approval, although there was some Republican opposition to him as a result of the policies he pursued in the Far East while he was Secretary of State.

Tydings called the President's selection of Marshall for the post "an excellent appointment in a critical time."

Millikin Also Approves

Senator Millikin of Colorado, chairman of the conference of all Republican Senators, commented: "General Marshall is certainly highly qualified for that job."

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had no comment on Johnson's resignation, but he praised the President's plan to appoint Marshall.

"Marshall is a very good man—a splendid military man," Connally declared.

Senator Jenner (R., Ind.), who criticized Marshall's proposal, before the latter became Secretary of State, to incorporate the Communists into the government of China, said "it sounds like Acheson is still running the show."

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) observed that he thinks "the wrong man is resigning"—that it ought to be Secretary of State Acheson, instead of Johnson, who was quitting.

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), the minority leader, declined comment on the resignation of Johnson, but said Secretary of State Acheson "is the man who should have resigned."

Acheson, Wherry added, "is the man whose policies have been repudiated, so far as Asia is concerned, by the President himself."

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), a member of the Armed Services Committee, said he doesn't think the group ought to be "rushed" in considering whether it should amend the law to permit Marshall's acceptance of the post.

"There is a basic question involved of civilian control over the military and no fundamental change in this policy is going to be rushed trrough without study," he said.

Other comment:

Senator Gurney (R., S. Dak.): "General Marshall is one man this country owes a lot to and one man in whom it has complete confidence."

Senator Watkins (R., Utah: "I'm glad Johnson has resigned. He certainly was dead weight to the war effort."

Cordon Lauds Marshall

Senator Cordon (R., Oreg.): "I don't know where the President could find a better man than General Marshall."

Senator Murray (D., Mont.): "General Marshall is the most reliable man the President could have picked for the job at this time."

Senator Russell (D., Ga.): "Ordinarily I would not be in favor of a military man for Secretary of Defense, but these are not ordinary circumstances. No man is better qualified for the job and I would be willing to suspend the act requiring civilians in the post, so far as he is concerned."

Senator Lyndon Johnson (D., Tex.): "It is an excellent appointment. The Armed Services Committee will quickly report the bill making General Marshall eligible for the post. He's one man who led us to victory in World War II and he can unite Americans in the preparedness effort that will be necessary to avert World War III."

Senator Hill (D., Ala.): "The American policy of civilian authority over military is a sound one but in the critical situation which we face today, General Marshall's great ability and experience make him a splendid selection for the place."

Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.): "I still think we ought to keep in mind that the head of the Defense Department in normal times should be a civilian but these are not normal times and Marshall's selection is a very happy choice."

Paul Shriver Is Named U. S. Judge for Guam

President Truman yesterday nominated Paul D. Shriver of Colorado to be Federal district judge for Guam under the Pacific island's new civilian government.

At the same time he sent to the Senate the nomination of James G. Mackey of New York as United State district attorney for Guam.

Communist Effort Throughout Asia To Be Intensified

LONDON, Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Diplomatic quarters said today Russia is preparing a new intensified drive to spread her brand of communism throughout Asia where the trend of the many national liberation movements has upset the Soviet calculations.

They cited monitored broadcasts from Peking and Moscow reporting that the Soviet Academy of Sciences has been ordered to create a new Institute of Oriental Studies in Moscow which is "to concentrate" on all Oriental members of the Academy.

The task of the new institute was said to be "to study the history and cultures of countries as they exist today in the Orient."

"It must prepare dictionaries, grammars and textbooks of Chinese, Mongolian, Korean, Indian, Vietnamese and other languages," the Soviet Academy of Science report said.

Johnson Out as Defense Secretary

Asked about reports that he was leaving, he said:

"You know I can't say anything and I am not going to."

At 4:45 p. m., Press Secretary Ross disclosed later, President Truman telephoned General Marshall at his home in Leesburg, Va., and asked him to take over as Defense Secretary.

"I told him that I would," Marshall later told reporters, "but, of course, it would take a special act of Congress to permit me to take it."

The provision in the National Security Act which makes General Marshall ineligible reads:

"There shall be a Secretary of Defense, who shall be appointed from civilian life by the President, by and with the advice of the Senate: Provided, That a person who has within 10 years been on active duty as a commissioned officer in a regular component of the armed services shall not be eligible for appointment as Secretary of Defense."

General Marshall has long been a great favorite with members of Congress, and the indications were strong last night that the way would be cleared for him to serve the country again.

However, there were some dissident voices.

Representative W. Sterking Cole (R., N. Y.), a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said he had the greatest respect for Marshall, but added that he would fight any move to amend the law to permit his appointment.

He said the committee unanimously approved the ban on military men and argued that it was "just as important now as it was then."

Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, called a meeting of the committee for this morning to consider the Marshall nomination. He said it was "an excellent choice at a critical time."

Secretary Johnson, who won White House favor by helping raise funds for a hard-pressed Democratic Party in 1948, has long been under fire. The Republicans charged at the time that his appointment as successor to the ailing James Forrestal was a "reward" for his money-raising efforts.

His earlier public service had ended in a row. As Assistant Secretary of War in the Roosevelt administration, he had a much-publicized disagreement with Harry Woodring, then Secretary of War, over the transfer of arms to countries then fighting Germany. President Roosevelt solved the problem by naming Henry L. Stimson, a Republican, as Secretary of War and appointing a new Assistant Secretary.

Johnson, as Secretary of Defense, set about cutting what he called the "fat" from the armed services, and soon was locked in quarrels with the admirals and the Marine Corps.

Criticism of Johnson mounted once war broke out in Korea. Republicans and some Democrats recalled his earlier statements that the armed services were "ready to meet any emergency," charged that he had allowed the Nation to be grossly unprepared, and demanded that he be fired.

President Truman, who had actually set the ceiling on the armed forces budget, charged all this to politics. His associates were heard to criticize Johnson for "talking too much" and for "running for President," but there was no indication up to a week or so ago that he really was in any danger.

Over the weekend came the news that Mr. Truman was angry with Johnson for the job the Defense Department was doing on Secretary of State Acheson.

"Of this you may be sure," said one White House aide, "the President feels that Secretary of State Acheson has borne up in this case with supreme dignity and will remain in the Cabinet after Johnson has gone."

In forcing Johnson out, Mr. Truman reversed the position he took on August 3 at a news conference. He said then that Johnson would not resign as long as he was President. He scolded Representative Percy Priest of Tennessee, Democratic whip, for suggesting that Johnson and Acheson ought to resign.

Still later, on August 31, Mr. Truman said at a news conference that he had no intention of firing Johnson. Asked whether he was "embarrassed" by Johnson's presence in his Cabinet, he bristled and said he was not—that if he were, he'd announce it and let everybody know it.

Even as late as September 7, the day he spoke before the Marine Corps League at the Statler, he seemed to be defending Johnson. He said then that the approach of the November election had caused "unfounded attacks to be made on certain men in public service."

"It is not only unfair," he said, "it is unjust, and those attacks in the long run are not on the individuals on whom they are made, they are direct attacks on the President of the United States, who is responsible under the present situation for the Government, and for its actions and for its policy."

The Marine Corps League, at the last minute, sidetracked a resolution calling for the retirement of Secretary Acheson, but adopted one calling on the President to drop Johnson.

In asking General Marshall to take over Johnson's job, Mr. Truman turned to a man whom he admires above all others, one whom he has described as the greatest American of his times. The first time he asked a favor of Marshall he was turned down. He was a Senator at the time, and wanted to get into uniform. Marshall told him he could best serve by remaining on Capitol Hill.

Mr. Truman was President when he next asked a favor of Marshall. The date was November 27, 1945, and the famous soldier was preparing to enjoy a well-earned rest after his service as Chief of Staff of the Army in World War II. Patrick J. Hurley, with an angry blast, had just resigned as a special envoy to China.

The President telephoned Marshall at his Leesburg home and asked him if he would take over Hurley's job in China. The war-weary general said "Yes, sir," and soon was flying across the Pacific.

Mr. Truman decided to make Marshall Secretary of State even before James F. Byrnes retired from that post. Marshall assumed the No. 1 Cabinet job in January, 1947, and served for approximately two years. His service in the State Department was outstanding, marked as it was by the decision to contain communism and the Marshall Plan.

He resigned as Secretary of State on Inauguration Day, 1949, after an operation for a kidney ailment. Mr. Truman, in accepting the resignation, said "I am unwilling . . . to assume the responsibility of further jeopardizing your health."

There were some disturbing reports about Marshall's physical condition at the time. Toward the end of the year, however, he was so much better that Mr. Truman named him president of the American National Red Cross and reappointed him to that post last June.

The resignation of Stephen T. Early as Deputy Secretary of Defense was announced at the White House yesterday more than six hours ahead of Johnson's resignation.

After the first announcement, many asked: "If Steve goes, can Lou be far behind?"

Early talked to reporters at 4 o'clock, however, and said he was leaving for purely personal reasons, as Mr. Truman understood. He said he was tired and needed some rest.

Eventually, he will return to his job as vice president of the Pullman Co. Meantime, he said, he will "try and get lost for a while." When a reporter asked him if he might move to Chicago, Early said:

"I planted my roots in Washington in 1898. I'm too old to transplant them now and expect them to grow."

President Truman, in accepting Early's resignation, praised him handsomely and expressed "personal regret" that he was leaving.

In his letter accepting Johnson's resignation, Mr. Truman addressed him as "My dear Lou." He said he knew that Johnson was actuated by motives of the highest patriotism in resigning.

"In the terribly regrettable circumstances that have arisen," the President said, "I feel that I must concur in your judgement and accept your proffered resignation as Secretary of Defense, effective at the close of business on September 19, 1950."

He didn't say what the terribly regrettable circumstances were, and the only clue was Johnson's reference to the enemies he had made in trying to carry out his job in the Pentagon.

Although there has been much talk of the differences between Johnson and Acheson over Far Eastern policy, the only public evidence of any breach is to be found in hearings before the Senate Appropriations Committee on August 30. These were made public yesterday.

Johnson, testifying before the committee, admitted that "there have been differences of opinion between Mr. Acheson and myself on foreign policy." He insisted, however, that he had never been guilty of "any undercutting of the Secretary of State" and said their differences had been "largely resolved in good will and understanding."

Acheson, testifying at the same closed-doors hearings, agreed that Johnson was not attempting to "undercut him."

That Johnson's resignation was arranged hurriedly and was a surprise to many of his associates was indicated by a speech which Assistant Secretary of Defense Paul H. Griffith had composed for delivery last night at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Griffith said in his prepared text that critics of Johnson were following Communist tactics in breaking down public confidence in the Government.

underground since the Korean War started.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said that the efforts of "large numbers" of Communists to cover their trails presents an internal security problem that makes the World War II Nazi fifth-column problem look "very small."

"They have," said Hoover of the Communists, "in every way they possibly could, endeavored to cover their trails, to destroy records, to destroy documents, to close headquarters, to find hiding places for their key members, and to be prepared for operations if and when open war should be declared or if and when the Communist Party finds it expedient to completely disband in a technical sense, but in a factual sense, still be in operation."

To combat against probable widespread Communist sabotage in case of war, Hoover suggested that Congress might consider exempting all local, State and Federal law enforcement officers from the draft.

The Senate committee is expected to approve the huge supplemental defense bill today. Yesterday the group voted to give the State Department the full $97,212,000 it has asked for the "Voice of America" to launch a strong counter attack to Russian propaganda.

It restored a 20 million dollar cut made by the House. The final figure, if the Senate agrees with the committee, will be decided by a joint Senate-House conference.

Other salient testimony made public by the committee:

(1) A disclosure by Rear Admiral Alfred M. Pride, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, that the Navy plans to establish three new air bases in the Far East and will reopen one in Okinawa.

(2) An estimate by Army intelligence that nearly 30 percent of Russia's total national income goes for military purposes—compared to our six percent. The USSR, it was said, has 4,500,000 men in its armed forces. While one-third of our military budget goes for pay of personnel, the Soviets spend only 7 to 10 percent of their military outlay for such purposes.

Huks Make Day Attack Near U. S. Clark Field

MANILA, Sept. 12 (AP).—Communist-led Hukbalahap guerillas raided a town about 10 miles from the United States Clark Field Airbase today.

Two members of the new Filipino Civilian Guard were killed and four wounded. The raid, on Arayat in Pampanga province, was the first by the Huks in daylight in many months.

Fighting was reported continuing. A dispatch to the Manila Times said about 150 Huks were in the raiding party.

Big 3 Chiefs Meet, Narrow Gap Apart

single Atlantic force for the defense of western Europe, under an American chief of staff, and (2) transforming the existing supply committee of the North Atlantic treaty organization into an executive agency, with powers to direct the armament production of the West.

From all three delegations, too, came unofficial statements emphasizing that western Germany should not have a national army under a German general staff. Sir Ivone Kirkpatrick, the British high commissioner in Germany, insisted to reporters that the Germans themselves did not want an army—an opinion that American officials in Germany have also stressed in recent weeks.

But at this point agreement ended. A reporter asked Bevin whether he agreed with the reported American view that the only practical way to use German forces was to integrate them in a combined army of the West.

Declines to Go Further

"I don't quite take that view," was his answer. "I don't think it's the right way to bring Germany back into the comity of nations." But he declined to go further, saying only that "the defense of Europe is vital to the peace of the world."

[Diplomatic informants reported that the United States and France plan to send new divisions to western Germany "as quickly as possible" to match Britain's announced decision to send another fully equipped division there, according to the United Press.

[The United States, it was reported, intends to send a division about January 1 as the first installment on President Truman's pledge to provide "substantial" additional American reinforcements. United States forces in Germany now are believed to total about 80,000.

[France, it was reported, plans to boost her forces in western Germany as part of her plan to increase her armed strength in Europe to 20 divisions.]

The United States, as the champion of states' rights and genuine federalism in western Germany, dislikes setting up a big centralized police force. It dislikes especially, setting up an armed police in the West as an offset to the disguised army the Russians have created in their eastern zone.

For purposes of internal security in Germany, the United States is willing to set up special mobile units of the state police, which can be rushed across state borders to troubled spots if necessary.

The British, on the other hand, think the Americans are being doctrinaire in wanting to preserve the state structure of German internal security. The British are more willing to set up a centralized police to cope with Communist infiltration and agitation.

And they are deeply concerned lest the Western powers in Germany permit any rearmament that the Russians could regard as "provocative."

For this latter reason the British are hesitant about soliciting western German units for a combined Western army.

The French, too, would like to delay any such decisions until after a Western army has been organized, and they emphatically oppose the American idea incorporating German units up to division strength.

Cause of British Worry

As for Asia, the other area of disagreement, the British and French make no secret of their worry over American policy in Formosa. They would be willing to send a United Nations Commission to the island to study its future, as the Americans propose, but only on one condition—that Communist China be invited to Lake Success to state its case beforehand.

The British and French concede that Secretary Acheson is the target of political attack over Formosa, and that his hands are tied by the Republicans in Congress. Yet their delegates here argue, with deep earnestness, that the West must take greater account of Asian opinion, especially Indian opinion, on Asian issues.

They rather enjoy the ironic fact that Britain and France, the hated "colonial powers" of former days, find it necessary to give this kind of advice to the United States.

PUC Extends Date For Using Old Tokens

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday extended to January 1 the period in which Capital Transit Co. patrons may present an old token and two cents for bus or streetcar fare.

Cost of tokens went up about two cents in July and customers were given a month in which to use up old tokens. The company twice asked that the period be extended. CTC Vice President E. Cleveland Giddings said there are so few old tokens still out that "we would prefer to let people use them than ask them to take two or three to the company office."

Phone Service Tie-up Ends In Alexandria

Normal telephone service was estored to Alexandria early yesterday following a 24-hour period during which the city's telephone exchanges were virtually isolated from downtown Washington.

Employes of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. worked throughout the night in a driving rain to replace a block-long section of cable which became waterlogged during Sunday night's heavy rains, short-circuiting lines to most of the District exchanges.

By the time most business places opened yesterday morning, telephone users were able to make contact with all dial telephone linked to the Alexandria lines, a spokesman for the telephone company said. However, a "flood" of calls immediately after the trouble was corrected resulted in frequent busy signals, the spokesman said.

Only Washington calls were affected by the short circuit.

Lawyer-Gambler Tie Charged by Probers

Randolph pl. nw., Fischbach started off:

"You've been in the numbers game since about 1947, haven't you?.

"Yes, sir."

"How much business did you do?"

"About $50 a week, but sometimes nothing."

"How much of that did you get?"

"A quarter of a dollar."

"Who did you turn in to?"

"We don't know the man. They always keep that man hid from me. We just put money in the bag with the slips and left it in a car on the corner."

Green was arrested last winter and taken to a precinct station. Four hours later, he said, Weinstein arrived to bail him out.

"Did you know the bondsman before?" Fischbach asked.

"No, sir."

"Did you pay for any of the bond?"

"No, sir."

"Did the bondsman ask you to pay him?"

"No, sir."

After Green identified Hughes as his attorney, Fischbach asked him how he came to meet his lawyer?

"He just came up to me in court and said 'Are you Green,' and I said 'Yes,' and he said 'I'm your lawyer'," Green replied.

"Did you know him before?" Fischbach asked.

"No, sir."

"Did your lawyer ask you to pay him?"

"No, sir."

Lawyer Can't Recall Witness

At this point Hughes was called into the committee room. "Does this man Green look familiar to you?"
Fischbach asked.

"No, sir, I have no recollection of ever having seen Mr. Green before in my life," Hughes replied.

Hughes said he could find no record of the Green case in his office. He explained he moved his office in December. Hughes' name appeared in the court record of the Green case as attorney.

Weinstein was then called and testified his records showed he wrote the bond for Green and had been paid $37.

"Who paid you the premium?" Fischbach asked.

"I haven't got the vaguest idea," the bondsman replied.

Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.) interrupted the questioning with "If I were a judge of that court, you would know who paid you that premium. You wouldn't do any business in my court if you didn't. That's what the trouble is with these courts."

The committee got no more information from Hughes and Weinstein in other cases.

Another convicted gambler, William W. Marow, testified he was referred to Hughes and paid him $100 cash. Hughes denied this flatly. Marow then repeated his statement and said he had been given a receipt.

Marow also testified he paid Weinstein $75 in premiums for the $1500 bond set in his case, instead of the regular cut-rate premium of $37.50 for gambling offenses.

Convicted numbers writer Winston Sims also testified he was bailed out by Weinstein and represented by Hughes, had paid neither man a cent, and that neither asked him for any money. He said he was referred to Hughes by a numbers runner named "Ronald."

Weinstein jumped up and said "The defendant is mistaken."

Ford was the first witness in the morning session.

He was reluctant to name some of his gambling clients, he said, "because the general public has no idea that they are gamblers." He claimed the privilege of confidence between an attorney and his client prevented him from revealing their names.

Ford called Emmitt Warring, alleged czar of the numbers business, "a fair and honest gambler," whom he was currently representing now before the Bureau of Internal Revenue on tax matters.

He said he knew no Warring employees, but knew two Warring "associates," but declined to reveal their names. He said he would "like to submit this question (about the names of the Warring associates) to a committee of the bar association to learn if it would be proper . . . to name them."

Ford said he discussed the Warring "enterprise" with Internal Revenue officials and with the Department of Justice, but declined to define the enterprise.

Allder was called to explain who paid him for representing one convicted gambler.

Allder testified his records showed in the case of Sandy Leroy Smith that he was paid $50 on account of a $125 fee.

"Who paid you?" Fischbach asked.

"As far as I know, he did," Allder replied.

Smith was then called and testified someone furnished Allder as his lawyer.

"Did you pay Allder?" Fischbach asked.

"No, sir."

"Do you know who did?"

"No, sir."

Best Recollection

Allder then repeated it was his best recollection that he had been retained and paid by Smith.

"No, sir," Smith said. "I never did have the money."

The committee resumes hearings at 10 a. m. today to receive reports from the administrative officers of the District courts, prisons and police department.

The committee had little success in nailing down the details of how either the Lyre Club or the Hide-Away operated.

Sam Schanker, 4411, Lee hwy., Arlington, Va., testified he was a "dummy" incorporator of the Hide-Away, and that the club had been organized as a business and that he had a long criminal record.

Joseph B. Horowitz, 508 East Schuyler rd., Silver Spring, Md., president and manager of the Hide-Away, testified Schanker had not been a "dummy" incorporator, that the club was organized for charitable, not business, purposes, and that he had no idea Schanker had a long criminal record.

"What do you do about uniting persons of the medical and legal professions?" Fischbach asked, reading from the club's charter.

"We sort of introduce one to the other and see if they can't work things out their own way," Horowitz answered.

"What do you do with whisky that members bring to the club and never call for?" Fischbach asked.

"Every year or so we destroy the extra whisky," he answered.

"I thought you had been open only since last December?"

"Well, we have some bottles down there with dust that thick on them," Hoorwitz answered, gesturing with his fingers an inch apart.

"Pretty dusty place," Fischbach countered.

"Yes, it is," Horowitz said.

Vincent R. Grillo, former operator of the now defunct Spotlight Club and convicted tax evader, testified he is now the doorman at the Lyre Club.

But it developed through other witnesses that his wife, Mildred Grillo, originally financed the club two years ago, was the owner of the club building, was the secretary-treasurer of the corporation, the club landlord and cashier, and the owner of the club's soft-drink concession.

Small Compensation

Whenever a citizen suffers irreparable injuries at the hands of a negligent public servant, there is a strong claim upon the community for means with which to ease the suffering of the victim. It was doubtless recognition of this principle that induced Senator Kefauver to introduce a bill to pay $10,000 to Miss Dorothy Kilmer, who was injured by a bullet said to have been carelessly discharged from the revolver of a District of Columbia policeman two years ago. The case deserves a careful investigation. Ten thousand dollars would be small compensation for an injury which has apparently paralyzed the victim for life.

School Crisis

Some 500 school districts in various parts of the country will receive benefits under the limited aid to education bill which Congress has adopted. Under the terms of the bill, Federal funds will go on a matching basis to a few economically disadvantaged areas where local taxation cannot meet critical needs and to districts where Federal installations such as military bases or atomic energy plants have swamped local facilities with an overwhelming number of school-age children. This assistance to the Nation's ailing public school system is desperately needed and admirable as far as it goes. Unfortunately it does not go very far in relation to the national need. It constitutes no more than an application of first aid to a patient suffering from multiple contusions, severe shock and general breakdown.

Here in the District of Columbia, where the condition is not nearly as acute as in many other communities, the opening of the school season Monday found 1800 pupils forced to attend classes on a part-time basis. The condition will be corrected in large part when construction now under way is completed. But at least for the time being a considerable body of youngsters is going to have its schooling seriously curtailed. Many others will be in overcrowded classrooms where overburdened teachers will be unable to give them the individual attention they ought to receive. Many will be in antiquated buildings which lack important teaching facilities. What this comes down to is that the children of the District of Columbia are being short-changed on their education.

Of course, this kind of cheating of children is going on all over the country. The justification commonly offered is economy. We produced a bumper crop of babies during the war and postwar years and now that they are beginning to knock at school doors it appears that we cannot afford to take care of them. We are not even, generally speaking, making any adequate provision to take care of the still greater numbers who will be ready for school in the years immediately ahead. It is easy to forget that these children will present an inexorable bill in one form or another—if not in terms of present schooling, then in terms of future delinquency, ignorance and bad citizenship.

Tax Obstruction

The delay of the tax bill in the futile hope of writing an excess-profits tax into it may be good politics, but it seems to us poor public service. The present bill, as Speaker Rayburn took the floor to explain, has passed both the House and Senate with no excess-profits provisions. No excess-profits section could be added in conference without a gross distortion of the legislative process. The only reasonable course for Congress to take is to pass the present bill quickly and follow it up with an excess-profits tax as soon as feasible. That is the procedure for which the Speaker and Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee pleaded, but their efforts to send the tax bill to conference were temporarily blocked by Representatives Eberharter and Stephen M. Young, both Democrats.

Speaker Rayburn and Representative Doughton favor an excess-profits tax, as does this newspaper. But complicated measures of this sort cannot be pulled out of an empty hat. President Truman recognized this when he said in his radio address the other night that additional tax legislation, including an excess-profits levy, should be enacted "as soon as possible." The Treasury has yet to submit its recommendations. The Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation says there is not time to write a workable law at the present session. In these circumstances it would be dangerous to delay the $4,508,000,000 tax measure which is close to enactment and which must be finally passed promptly if it is to take effect on October 1. To hold up this measure because an excess-profits bill is yet to be written would amount to perilous obstructionism in these inflationary times.

Johnson's Resignation

The muscular personality of Louis Johnson had endowed him with a legion of enemies before he became Secretary of Defense. He proceeded to add to them. The Navy turned against him to a man, most of the Air Force, perhaps a sizable proportion of the Army, the entire Pentagon, most of the newspapermen in the Capital, and everybody (and his family and friends and Representatives in Congress) who was affected by his economies, whether or not they were made on the recommendation of the Hoover Commission. On top of that, he became a scapegoat for a Nation which had come to expect that opposing armies shall melt on first sight of an American soldier. It is said that you know a man by the enemies he makes, but Mr. Johnson made such a variety of them that no picture of the man emerges from this listing.

That the President has dropped his Secretary of Defense is a belated recognition that Mr. Johnson had become an embarrassment to his Administration. However, President Truman is, so far as we can discover, singular among Presidents in that form of recognition. He has a habit of recognizing friends, and sticking to them. In a man the trait is admirable, but in a President it is a liability; his office, if not his oath, requires him to subordinate his friendships to the public service. President Roosevelt did not like to hurt his aides, and, rather than fire them when they became a handicap, he had a habit of transfering them to other posts. If, in the process, Roosevelt balled up his Administration, he had more of a sense that public officials were expendable than Mr. Truman has. This contrast makes this step of Mr. Truman's the more extraordinary. After swearing he would ne'er consent, he has consented, and out the window in this instance has gone his cronyism, his sense of party obligation, his insensitivity to press attack and press suggestion—and his stubbornness.

Thus there must have been a last straw, and it is our guess that it was evidence that Secretary Johnson was trying to save himself from the wolves by throwing his colleagues to them. The last example was the VFW convention in Chicago. According to a reputable reporter, Mr. Jay G. Hayden, Mr. Johnson was apprised that the veterans had a rod in pickle for him in the shape of a condemnatory resolution. Immediately "the half-dozen Defense Department lobbyists on the job" are alleged to have gone into action in a big way. "They contended especially that it was unfair to make Mr. Johnson the sole goat for policies emanating actually from the State Department." So Mr. Acheson also got a broadside. Undercutting of this sort is apparently past the stomaching of Mr. Truman. It is intolerable at any time, but more than ever when the country needs the sustaining and inspiring example of Executive unity.

Louis Johnson during all his two terms of official life has been a center of controversy. He seems to have a gift for disputation, if not gratuitous trouble-making. He had vaulting ambitions which he seemed to express by anticipation. The President must have known his man, for he was forewarned enough times about his choice when Johnson's name was first bruited as successor to Forrestal. This newspaper, for instance, said November 16, 1948:

> No doubt Mr. Johnson was for For-Truman-Before-Philadelphia, that he played a key role in getting anything like a campaign chest together, that rewards are inseparable from the American political system. But these factors at this crisis in the national life should have nothing to do with the great and significant office of Secretary of Defense. . . . whatever else his gifts, [he] has nothing to offer commensurate with the importance of the post to which in some quarters he has already been assigned. Here is an office that calls for a civilian mind and outstanding toughness and that breadth of view and imagination which is known as statesmanship. It is just as important as the Secretaryship of State, and precisely the same qualities are necessary for this office, too.

The man who, Congress permitting, will succeed Mr. Johnson, General Marshall, has those requisite qualities, even to the possession of a mind that has had a chance of becoming civilian oriented; and the President is to be congratulated on inducing him to return to full-time public service. It should be said, however, that General Marshall will profit from Mr. Johnson's job in removing much of the fat in the department and in laying a permanent foundation of unification. When spites and rancors are forgotten this achievement will be part of Johnson's escutcheon. Now we leave the field to all Johnson's enemies to say that they "got" him.

Trade With Russia

The Department of Commerce announces that in future licenses to export strategic materials will no longer be granted to countries that re-export them to Russia and her satellites or ship similar commodities of their own production. Mr. Churchill's excoriation of the Labor government for permitting exports of machine tools to Russia and the disclosure that a U. S. shipment to London of molybdenum, a steel hardening agency used in the manufacture of jet turbine engines, was recently re-exported to Russia underlines the need for a new approach to the problems of trade with Russia. However, the mere tightening of our own export restrictions cannot be relied upon to prevent sales to Russia of articles that Americans are forbidden to export. The remedy obviously lies not in waving a club over the heads of friendly nations, but in achieving an agreement concerning the exports to Russia that should be banned. Great Britain, for instance, prohibits the export only of articles having direct strategic value, while the United States bans shipments of various other products that help to build up Russia's war-making potential. Surely there is room for a compromise that would be reasonably satisfactory to both countries and would at the same time make our own restrictive policies more effective.

Until recently the United States was urging the nations of western Europe to expand their trade with nondollar countries as a means of narrowing the dollar gap and reducing their dependence on Marshall Plan aid. Trade with Russia helps to bridge that gap, and it is not surprising that ECA countries are reluctant to take steps to suppress or reduce it. Today, however, the countries of western Europe, united by a common fear of Russia, are arming to defend themselves against possible aggression, and it is inconceivable folly for them to carry on a trade that strengthens the war-making capacity of the feared nation. Furthermore, with Marshall Plan funds, plus United States military aid, the Atlantic Pact nations will be under less pressure to expand their trade with nondollar countries. For they will not only be supplied with the dollars required for essential imports, but this country's defease buying will increase their dollar sales. In any case, a common policy in respect to trade with Russia is imperative and political rather than economic considerations should determine the character and volume of such trade. Nothing less will persuade the free world that the North Atlantic alliance is really an alliance—indeed, a common foreign policy going beyond an understanding over trade with Russia is essential.

Anticommunism

Anticommunism proved stronger than Americanism in the Senate of the United States yesterday. The McCarran bill, adopted by a vote of 70 to 7, after the more realistic and practicable Kilgore proposal had been rejected, aims a spectacular roundhouse right at the Communists and will hit a great many loyal and decent Americans who are guilty of nothing worse than the holding of unpopular opinions. It will also hit certain distinctive American liberties that have been a source of pride and of strength to this country for a century and a half—ever since the noxious Sedition Act lapsed into disuse in 1800.

No doubt many of the Senators who voted for the McCarran bill did so in the belief that they were acting to protect their country from the danger of subversion. No doubt, also, many others voted for it in the belief that the tide of hysteria has now grown so great that a vote in opposition would be politically dangerous. This paltering with panic is more dangerous than the bill itself. Fortunately the President of the United States has said unequivocally that he will veto a measure he considers unconstitutional, no matter what the political consequences. His courage deserves the country's highest respect. We trust it will set an example and provide a steadying influence in Congress if the question of overriding a presidential veto should arise.

Bomb Estimate

The number of atomic bombs in this country's stockpile is one of the most closely guarded military secrets. Disclosure of the secret would be punishable under the terms of the Atomic Energy Act by a 10-year prison sentence—even if it were done without intent to injure the United States. Had Senator Stennis known what he was talking about when he told a Mississippi audience Monday evening that "we have 450 or more fullgrown atomic bombs," he would have been guilty of a most serious crime. But the chances are that he will not be prosecuted for his statement for the simple reason that, presumably, the Senator was talking strictly through his hat.

But it is dangerous to talk even through one's hat on this subject. And to suggest, as Senator Stennis did, that the putative stockpile of atomic bombs should be used to obliterate every major city in Russia is to provide a great deal of grist for the Communist propaganda mills. Coming from a United States Senator at a time of critical international tension, this is a most mischievous interference in the country's foreign affairs. The best that can be said for Senator Stennis is that he has disclosed nothing more than his own ignorance.

Early's Departure

Undersecretary Early's resignation yesterday came as no surprise, for he has made no secret for months past that he wanted, for health and family reasons, to return to private life. His doctor is said to have insisted on his retirement. This is emphasized because there will doubtless be an effort to connect his going with the fate of Secretary Johnson. This does an injustice to Mr. Early. Mr. Early is a friend of long standing of Mr. Johnson, but, even if he's been cast of late for an unfortunate role he has a status in his own right and it is not too much to say that the public service is impoverished by Mr. Early's departure.

No man in Washington knows the ins and outs of official life more than Mr. Early does. None is so favorably regarded by the newspaper corps. He is well and familiarly known to them for the long service he did as FDR's press secretary, and it was the return of an institution when "Steve," complete with his shrewdness, policial know-how, and his splenetic disposition, returned to the Washington scene at the Department of Defense.

"Political Apathy"

Regarding the Prince Georges County situation, Ina R. Friedman's letter of September 10 hits the nail on the head when she terms the disease "political apathy." But the disease is not confined to the individual who fails to register as a voter; it also permeates the individual who votes the straight party machine ticket without a critical review of the machine's policies and tactics.

A symptom of the disease is the critical educational problem of the county. In her article of January 22, 1950, Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer told about the $330,000 cut (later reduced to $310,000) in the 1949-50 school budget because funds were lacking. All schools lost their clerks, telephones, postage and other necessary items (including toilet paper.)

Today a citizen of Prince Georges County can read the statement issued with his tax bill and learn that receipts for 1949-50 will exceed expenses by $139,000 and that $75,000 will be returned to the general fund from the metropolitan improvement district fund, and $50,000 from the road maintenance fund. What he cannot learn from published statements, however, is that the county's general fund contained $866,000 on June 30, 1949, of which $194,000 was in cash. A conjecture can be made that an established policy and tactic of the machine has been to hide surplus funds during the first three years of a term in order that a tax cut can be made in the election year, and this policy was carried out despite the critical school situation.

The county's professional and business people, perhaps, are in the best position to act for better government. Yet, an attorney of my acquaintance acknowledges the situation, shrugs it off as an impossible one with which to deal, and admits that his children are being educated in the District of Columbia. A conjecture can be made that many of the county's professional and business people are among the 8000 individuals Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer lists as party members indorsing the organization's slate, hence its policies and tactics. Undoubtedly, they find it good business to support the organization, for the organization has many indirect financial controls in the county. Undoubtedly, many of them send their children to schools in the District of Columbia, particularly when they reach high-school age.

Political apathy is a silent servant for machine organizations. State Senator L. Harold Sothoron doesn't want to see county issues debated on a public platform. The county commissioners soft-pedal changes in government organization which in other areas would be thoroughly digested at public hearings throughout the jurisdiction.

The strategy is a good one—the fewer the issues brought into public review, the less opportunity to jar loose the political apathy of not only the individuals who do not register to vote but also those who do. Then, perhaps, the machine can control the election with 8000 votes and will receive a franchise to govern 194,000 people.

Truman's Speech

Joe Stalin should be chuckling in his vodka after President Truman's speech Saturday night.

Imagine spending millions of the 15-billion-dollar defense fund to support 30 more American divisions in Germany. Why waste American kopecs on the old-fangled anti-World War II style of defense. Ivan could push 30 American divisions into the sea so bloodily, so brutally swift, so murderously effective that it would make the top brass' heads swim.

We are, Mr. Truman and politicians, living in an atomic age. Why not keep 30 divisions on United States soil to produce A-bombs, H-bombs, rockets and all the ugly paraphernalia necessary to fight war in an "atomic age"?

Produce at full capacity all the modern weapons needed for warfare in an atomic age and then sit back and relax—see how fast Uncle Joe would mobilize, manufacture, murder and shove Communistic evils down the throats of people who do not want any part of Stalinism.

Why not spend these defense billions on the Air Force, Intelligence and atomic research and productive plants? These three components will win a war. The old-fangled infantry will not.

Palestine War

In a letter printed in your paper on September 3, Mr. Maurice Friedman, chairman, American Zionist Council of Washington, takes issue with Mr. A. M. Ramadan and asserts that the Arab states conducted a war of aggression in Palestine.

When the Arab troops entered Palestine the Arab government promptly notified the U. N., and stated the reason for their action.

Is it "aggression" for the Egyptians or Syrians to come to the aid of their Palestinian brethren who were being driven from their homes or massacred as at Deir Yasin by armed Jews from eastern Europe? Would it be aggression for Virginians to go to the aid of the people of Maryland if the latter are attacked by foreign elements?

Mr. Friedman does not believe that the Arab refugees number a million, and refers to the Clapp Mission report which he says "pointed out that the total number of refugees could at the utmost be 652,000."

This figure, which was apparently taken from the table on page 22 of the final report of the mission, does not represent and was not intended to represent the total number of refugees, but only those considered then destitute refugees. The total number of Arab refugees being fed by the U. N. on September 30, 1949, including 31,000 Arabs in Israel, is given on the next page of this report as 1,002,243.

Let us concede that the number of refugees is only 652,000, and that these left voluntarily and were not driven out. We would still have the question why they are not allowed to return to their homes, despite the resolutions of the U. N. and the efforts of its Conciliation Commission. FRANK C. SAKRAN.

Memo to Fighters

Some days ago the James E. Walker Post No. 26, American Legion, Department of the District of Columbia, unanimously endorsed and adopted the enclosed letter and ordered it sent to the Twenty-fourth Infantry Regiment now fighting in Korea. The post consists of approximately 600 veterans of both world wars. The Twenty-fourth Infantry, as you probably know, is a regiment with a large preponderance of colored enlisted men and with the staff, field and line officers about evenly divided between white and colored.

After the statement of the Soviet delegate to the Security Council (Mr. Malik) on Tuesday, September 5, in which he referred to "Negro troops fighting in Korea under compulsion of their capitalistic masters," we feel that the enclosed letter might well be published.

To the Members of the 24th Inf. Regiment, U.S.A.,

Soldiers of the United States:

We, the members of the James E. Walker Post, No. 26, American Legion, Department of District of Columbia, a group of veterans of both world wars, send you greetings and congratulations. We have heard and are constantly hearing of your soldierly qualities and splendid fighting and we want you to know that we are very proud of you. We know that you will maintain and augment the enviable combat record of your famous regiment. May God guide your bullets and direct your strokes against this monstrous aggressor.

You are fighting in a righteous cause, against a tyrannical, crafty, cruel, insincere, and evil enemy. You are fighting to maintain and preserve the best concept of government yet created by the mind of man. You are showing by your deeds your attitude to totalitarian dictators and we want you to know that we, here at home, feel as you do.

Paraphrasing a cryptic remark by Joe Louis, we say that there is nothing wrong with the United States that Red communism can cure, or that we want it to cure. Here in the homeland, good Americans of all races, creeds and colors are solving our internal problems by good straightforward American methods, namely dissemination of the facts, conferences, discussions, the courts and the ballot.

The heart of America is sound, the conscience of America is being revitalized and righteousness, fair play and the belief in the brotherhood of man are steadily gaining way. We are moving toward the day of the realization of the American ideal. You, out there on the battlefields of Korea, are playing a significant part in hastening that day.

We know that you are busy with the business of the United Nations and do not have too much time for talk, but we wonder whether you know who the oldest holder of the Medal of Honor is? Well, he is a fine old gentleman, Dennis Bell by name, who lives quietly right here in Washington, D. C. He might be the grandfather of any one of you.

We know that you will continue to fight the good fight and to make the Twenty-fourth Infantry dreaded and feared by the enemies of decency and respected and loved by those who believed as we do. God bless you and sustain you.

DOUGLAS RICHARDSON, Commander.
RUTH CARTER, Adjutant.

Spreading The Work Load

By Malvina Lindsay

Part-Time Schedules

ONLY A FEW months ago the old fear of being without a job was beginning to haunt labor's vulnerable front lines—older people, the physically handicapped, untrained youth. Now suddenly under the tragic circumstances of rearmament, there is prospect of more jobs than people to fill them.

In meeting this new dilemma, how much effort will be made to avoid the human waste of the last war—untrained youngsters earning "big money" for sloppy work and being ruined in work attitudes for the future; fumbling oldsters thrown into the breach without training; housewives working eight-hour shifts in factories and six-hour ones at home; children on the loose during parents' absence?

True, such a situation might not develop short of total mobilization. But plans for preventing mistakes cannot be made under stress of emergency.

Present wide discussion over how to stretch manpower reveals two simple and obvious methods coming to the fore. One is to increase hours. The other is to recruit younger, able-bodied housewives.

It has been estimated that increasing the 40-hour week in all industries in which it prevails to 48 hours would add the equivalent of 12 million workers. But this is not always feasible. And how much do added hours increase production? Firms differ as to that. One found that a rest period twice a day increased production 9 percent while cutting down time 5 percent. A recent study made by the National Industrial Conference Board approves the 48-hour week as being the most efficient standard for wartime production, but calls a longer week self-defeating.

HOWEVER in view of the large number of married women already in industry, the 48-hour week would work some hardship on the home. Employers say they could recruit 15 percent more women if they "had to"—the labor force now being 29 per cent women. The women most employers want are younger housewives, many of whom have children. The call of high wages, patriotism, would no doubt bring many of them back into industry. But new family problems would result, especially if they had to work the six-day week of 48 hours.

It is evident that traditional methods of stretching manpower aren't enough this time. Hence some firms are reviewing their retirement-at-65 policies. Some are being more cordial to applicants past 45. Also many industries are cooperating with State branches of the Federal Security Agency's Division of Vocational Rehabilitation to employ more of the physically handicapped.

But what is needed above all is more part-time work. Women in the home, older people, boys and girls who should not leave high school to work—all these could be recruited on a large scale if there were more split shifts in industry, more part-time work available in business.

OLDER WOMEN and men who cannot stand up to demanding 40—or 44, or 48-hour weeks could also be recruited on a wide scale if tasks were geared to their physical strength.

Before the present emergency developed there was growing demand on the part of women for part-time work. This led the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor to start a survey of 10 representative cities to explore part-time opportunities for women in nonmanufacturing firms. Now this has been stepped up and results will be turned over to the National Security Resources Board. These are expected to show that part-time workers could release many other women for full-time work in critical occupations.

This part-time movement holds much meaning for the future. For as industrialism and city life increase, wives are deprived of their traditional role that the farm afforded of aiding the family income. Many of them of them need to work but can only leave their children on a part-time basis.

Moreover a study of adolescent-parent adjustments, reported recently to the National Council on Family Relations by Ivan Nye of Ohio University, showed that relationships between mothers and teen-agers were most satisfactory in homes where mothers worked on a part-time basis.

More encouragement of part-time work would help keep the growing elderly population productive, help youth to earn while attending schools. While now it could spread the load of work, in time it might spread the chance for work.

Loudoun Referendum

A news story in your issue of September 10 states that a petition for a referendum on the adoption of the county executive form of government for Loudoun County was presented to the Circuit Court by the League of Women Voters. This is incorrect.

The petition was presented by myself as chairman, and Howell S. Brown, Purcellville, the treasurer, of Loudoun Citizens for Home Rule.

We call this to your attention not to seek publicity, but to correct the falsehood deliberately circulated that the Loudoun League of Women Voters are the only countians interested in and working for stronger local government here.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Taking Stock

TOKYO.—In this dreary city, with its rancid colonial atmosphere, it is at least more possible to take stock than in Korea, where all attention always agonizingly centers on this regiment, that battalion, whose fate may be the fate of the whole defense line.

Taking stock, one must first add up the dreadful losses and heavy reverses of the past ten days. But then, one must write on the other side of the balance sheet that the situation of the North Koreans must also be very uncomfortable by now. With the most powerful effort they have yet made, the enemy has failed to drive the Americans and South Koreans from their vital beachheads. It was touch and go, but the line has been glued together again at last. Since the North Koreans also have temporarily expended the largest part of their frontline stocks of heavy equipment and ammunition, our forces ought to be able to come close to restoring the defense perimeter during the next phase.

Moreover, despite the great power massed for it, the enemy offensive during the past 10 days undoubtedly disclosed grave North Korean weaknesses. It took long to prepare, as was natural, since most of the reinforcements and replacements had to be brought to the front by night marches all the long way from Seoul, and even heavy ammunition was transported, in part, by coolie carrier. And the same air isolation of the battlefield that forced the enemy to these hard expedients also had another, even more significant effect.

During the offensive, great holes were torn in both the American and South Korean lines. Whole regiments were swallowed up. At least one division, the South Korean Capital Division, temporarily disintegrated. But because our air had destroyed his transport, the enemy could not fully exploit these break-throughs. His foot soldiers would pour through the holes, to be sure, but the armor and artillery to support them would come up more slowly. And before the marching North Koreans could effect a really deep and devastating penetration, our multitudinous trucks would bring up the reserves to halt and contain the enemy movement.

BY REPEATEDLY using this expedient, by coolheadedly conserving his tiny reserves for the big emergencies, Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker saved his beachhead from the imminent menace of catastrophe. It must be added, of course, that if this sort of cycle is to continue indefinitely, the beachhead will be gradually nibbled away to nothing, or will be suddenly lost by an eventual decisive mishap.

On the other hand, unless the boasting of the Pentagon is even more empty than usual, some additional forces must be on the way to the Korean war. Even a relatively small increment of force should be enough to permit us to assume the offensive. And here is the essence of the North Korean difficulty.

Virtually the whole existing power of the North Koreans is officially said to have been committed in this last grand attack. On this estimate, the North Koreans themselves have little left, beyond a reserve of one, or at the most two, divisions, a "defense command" at Seoul, and whatever may be in two training centers in the north. Moreover, all their power is not only committed, it is also committed at the extreme southern tip of the peninsula. With their transport shortage, the enemy cannot re-deploy rapidly to fill the military semi-vacuum which the rest of Korea now, in theory, should be.

Finally, since their grand attack has failed to produce its intended result, the whole enemy power is not too great, again in theory, to be contained by our existing forces. A relatively small increment of force should give us enough to achieve a break-through, or could even conceivably be landed in the North Korean rear. With well armed, armored and mechanized American units on the loose to the north of them, the position of the North Korean divisions besieging our beachhead in the south would become perilous indeed. Indeed if the break-through force were adequate, the whole of North Korea woulld be imperiled.

This reasoning is based, however, on two assumptions. First, there is the assumption that the intelligence is roughly correct, which is always doubtful. And second, there is the assumption that the existing power of the North Koreans will not suddenly be increased either by Chinese Communist or overt Soviet intervention.

ON THIS vital head, one can only say that the moment when we bring to bear enough additional power to take the offensive, will be the last moment when the Kremlin can make its choice. Either Chinese Communist or Russian divisions, armor and aircraft will then come to the rescue of the North Koreans, thus making a third World War almost inevitable, or Korea must then be written off by the Kremlin. Unless our secret service has been greatly strengthened lately, no one on earth can tell which the Kremlin will choose.

One must, however, note certain ominous recent signs, such as the sudden reappearance of "North Korean" aircraft over the battlefield; the intensification of Soviet air patrols at sea; and reported heavy movements, presumably of troops, in the presumably troop-empty region above the 38th Parallel. These signs can mean nothing or everything.

In these circumstances, there is nothing to do but wait and pray that the world will be spared another holocaust. And to this may be added one more prayer, that if we do succeed in tidying up this Korean mess, we shall not then crow and grow complacent over a trifling success; but that we shall remember the appalling demonstration of our own weakness, the glaring exposure of the fraudulence of our leadership, and that we shall act upon these hard lessons thereafter.

The Gallup Poll

Closer Relations With Spain Favored by Growing Numbers

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 12.—Signs of a changing public attitude about our relations with Spain are to be found in a public opinion study just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

For many years following the advent of Franco, popular sentiment in the United States was hostile to the Spanish government. Today in the wake of congressional authorization of a $62,500,000 Spanish loan—which President Truman has indicated he will hold up—the weight of public opinion in the institute survey is in favor of:

1. Admitting Spain as a member of the North Atlantic Security Pact and

2. Extending economic aid and sending military supplies to Spain now, provided Spain agrees to help us in case of war with Russia.

However, the vote on Spain joining the Atlantic Pact is not of overwhelming dimensions. While more favor than oppose it, the number in favor do not constitute an outright majority of all the persons questioned in the study.

This survey is designed to show first the opinions of the total sample of the population interviewed and next the opinions of the better-informed portion of the sample—those who were able to give a correct answer to the preliminary question, "With what country do you associate General Franco?"

A total of 56 percent correctly identified Franco with Spain.

Voters were asked:

"Do you think Spain should or should not be invited to join with the United States and Western European nations in the North Atlantic Security Pact?"

Here is the vote:

	All Voters	'Informed' Voters
Should	48%	53%
Should not	22	28
No opinion	30	19
	100%	100%

"Do you think the United States should or should not give military supplies and economic aid to Spain now if Spain agrees to help us in the event of a war with Russia?"

	All Voters	'Informed' Voters
Should	57%	58%
Should not	23	29
No opinion	20	13
	100%	100%

Sentiment for Spanish membership in the Atlantic Pact has increased since a similar survey in May, 1949. At that time the "informed" voters were evenly divided on the question.

The Spanish loan authorized by Congress was part of the $36,000,000,000 general appropriations act which President Truman signed Sept. 6.

In commenting on the measure the President said that he did not regard the Spanish loan provision as a directive, "which would be unconstitutional." Instead, he regarded it as an authorization in addition to authority already in existence under which loans may be granted to foreign nations.

Acheson's Hour

By Marquis Childs

Foreign Ministers' Meeting

NEW YORK.—This is Dean Acheson's hour. In a sense it is his vindication. The Secretary of State comes to this meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers with his own policy clearly defined and unequivocally indorsed by President Truman.

Childs

He can take justifiable pride in having come out on this plateau. The way up the slope has been difficult and thorny. Secretary of State Acheson has had to contest much of the way with Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, now resigned.

As Secretary Acheson sits down with Foreign Ministers Robert Schuman of France and Ernest Bevin of Great Britain, he will have a definite and firm set of proposals to put before them. These proposals will embody the immediate beginning of a greatly expanded defense system for western Europe on a basis of mutual contribution.

THIS IS IN accord with Acheson's long-time conviction that western Europe is the key to the peace and security of the world. It is oversimplifying the dispute to say that Acheson and Johnson were divided on the line of commitments for Asia versus commitments for Europe. But that is roughly true.

As he explained, in part at least, in the course of a television interview, his belief is that a rearmed western Europe will serve to deter the Russian from adventures on the periphery; the kind of adventures that, as in Korea, can waste away the substance and the will of the West.

In other words, using the analogy of a living organism, if the heart is strong then the extremities will be greatly strengthened and the enemy will hesitate to attack.

But with the heart of Europe as weak as it is, there has seemed to be no hope anywhere. The possibility always exists that this center, this core, might be overwhelmed at any time. The whole system was built on the most shaky foundation or on no foundation at all.

Like any other positive and integrated policy, this one has its grave risks in the kind of world in which we live. There is, above all, the risk that Soviet Russia may decide to move before western Europe can be strengthened.

In the discussions in the State Department leading up to the final decision on the American position, Acheson took full account of the risks. He pointed out that in giving the "go" sign to the North Koreans, the Russians had already taken the risk of general war. Being realists, the masters of the Kremlin must have figured just how serious that risk was before they took the decision to unleash the conflict in Korea.

IF THE Kremlin is willing to risk a general war, Acheson has pointed out, then the West cannot hesitate because of the danger of provoking the little band of men who rule the destinies of so many millions of people. The time has passed when a wait-and-see-what-happens stance can look like anything but the unhappy stance of an ostrich.

The question that occurs at once is how quickly can the Acheson policy be implemented. From Frankfurt in Germany, Gen. Mark Clark, chief of the Army's field forces, expresses optimism. He says the first American troops to augment occupation forces will arrive within four months. The intimation is that five new American divisions eventually will be sent to Europe.

Other military planners are not so optimistic. They say that divisions to be sent to Europe within a relatively short time would have to be National Guard divisions. Then, what would you do about dependents? American troops now on occupation duty have their wives and children with them. To extend this privilege to Guard divisions sent to west Germany would be costly and complicated.

A question with even broader implications is: What happens to these troops if months and even years go by and there is no war? America is virtually mobilized on a war footing. But none of the powerful incentives of a war are present. So there is serious deterioration, both economic and psychological, among soldiers and civilians.

Secretary Acheson would undoubtedly reply that this is one of the risks. In any event, he is off the dead center of rasping and harassing conflict and moving forward on a clear line in which he believes deeply and passionately.

Bill Signed To Modernize U. S. Budgets

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday signed legislation giving him power to overhaul Government budget procedures. It also provides for streamlining Federal accounting and auditing practices.

The measure, known as the Budgeting and Accounting Procedures Act of 1950, follows some of the recommendations of the Hoover Commission on Reorganization of the Government.

The House Expenditures Committee, which drafted the bill, said the primary aim is to bring the Government's fiscal practices up to date and to set up an accounting system incorporating "sound commercial and governmental practices and providing better controls over all Federal funds."

The bill directs the Comptroller General to prescribe uniform accounting practices for Government agencies and centers in each agency authority and responsibility to establish and maintain its own accounts under the general principles prescribed by the General Accounting Office.

In signing the measure, Mr. Truman termed it the most important legislation in its field since the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 was passed.

"For the first time, clear-cut legislation is provided which nails down responsibility for accounting, auditing and financial reporting in the Government," he said.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Joseph Pholien today announced that all Communists and fellow travelers will be purged from government jobs.

It was the government's first official move against the Communist Party, which has been losing strength in Belgium for the past four years. There are approximately 47,000 civil servants in Belgium. Government spokesmen declined to estimate how many were Communists.

'Red Channels' Bought as School 'Reference Book'

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 12 (U.P.).—School Supt. John Herron today disclosed that he had bought copies of the controversial pamphlet "Red Channels" for all Newark schools as a "reference book" for principals and teachers.

The pamphlet lists more than 100 stage, screen and radio personalities who, the pamphlet claims, have leftist links. Herron said it would not be used as a text for pupils, but would be placed on library shelves.

"Teachers should know something about the subversive action going on under our noses," he said.

A listing in "Red Channels" led to dismissal of Actress Jean Muir from the television show "The Aldrich Family" several weeks ago and an attack on Gypsy Rose Lee yesterday. Both actresses vehemently denied any sympathy for communism.

Spencer Gordon, Lawyer, Dies

was recommended by the District Bar Association for nomination to the Appeals Court bench here.

Mr. Gordon figured in many prominent District Court cases that were fought all the way to the Supreme Court. In one such case he represented the Chenery Corp. in litigation involving Securities Exchange Commission regulations.

The case has twice been to the Supreme Court and currently is again pending in that court. Chris Chenery, one of the major stockholders in the Chenery Corp., is the owner of Hill Prince, the Virginia-bred thoroughbred which won this year's Preakness.

In the early 1930s, Mr. Gordon was one of the receivers named for the Shoreham Hotel after the District banking firm financing the project failed. The receivership was dissolved in 1934.

Mr. Gordon also gained renown as a trial lawyer in many important will contests in District Court.

Mr. Gordon, whose home was at 2305 California st. nw., is survived by his widow, the former Mildred L. Jones of Elmira, N. Y.; a son, Spencer Gordon, jr., now a student at Princeton University, and two brothers, Frank B. Gordon of Pittsburgh, Pa., and J. Holdsworth Gordon of New York City.

A native of Washington, Mr. Gordon attended public schools here and was graduated from Princeton in 1909 with an A. B. degree. He was a Phi Beta Kappa. He received his LL. B. "with distinction" at George Washington University in 1912 and was a member of the Phi Delta Phi Legal Society, Order of the Coif.

Admitted to the District bar in 1912, Mr. Gordon practiced here, and later in Chicago, until World War I.

He enlisted as a flying cadet in the aviation and balloon schools, and was commissioned a second lieutenant aerial observer in December, 1918.

After the war Mr. Gordon returned to Washington and spent one month in the legal department of the Shipping Board before joining the firm of Covington & Burling.

During World War II, he was chairman of the advisory board for Selective Service in the District. He was a faculty member at George Washington University Law School for many years and is a former member of the board of directors of the District Bar Association.

An Episcopalian, he was a member of the vestry of Christ Church, Georgetown. He was vice president of the Metropolitan Club and a member of the University Club, the Chevy Chase Country Club, the Society of Cincinnati and the Lawyer's Club.

Mr. Gordon also was a member of the Graduate Council of Princeton University and secretary of the Class of 1909. For many years he had been counsel for the American Institute of Accountants, national professional organization of certified public accountants.

Funeral services for Mr. Gordon will be private. Burial, also private, will be in Oak Hill Cemetery. The family said that friends wishing to send flowers should instead make small contributions to Christ Church, Georgetown.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP).—Cotton futures registered declines of $1.50 to $2.10 a bale today on persistent hedging and liquidation.

In early dealings it became apparent that mills, who last week bid the market up into new seasonal high ground, were buyers only on the scale down. This prompted commission house and New Orleans selling which touched off stop loss orders. The market rallied at times, but encountered repeated selling flurries. Hedge selling against the new crop increased today, while hedging against CCC cotton was relatively small.

One on the Aisle—

A Spanish Tragedy Is Rare Fare Here

By Richard L. Coe

WHAT I KNOW about fifteenth century Spain could be engraved on the side of a dime, but "Madness of Love," a Spanish arrival at the Plaza, makes a historically convincing yarn of a fantastic love story.

This is the first Spanish picture to be shown here in quite a while and it's a very fancy production indeed. It's an absorbing tale, effectively told, and gives the leading actress, one Aurora Bautista, enough emotional scenes to pop Bette Davis' eyes on stalks.

The story tells how Queen Isabella's daughter (Columbus' Isabella, that is), having married Philip, Archduke of Austria, is set off her rocker by his romantic philanderings and his intrigues to occupy, by himself, the Spanish throne, to which he has only a consort's right.

Egged on by a wily councilor, Philip evolves a situation whereby he's able to make Queen Juana's all-too-accurate suspicions of his amours seem the product of an unhinged mind. Her grandmother was crazy, Philip reminds the Council, and here's his wife imagining all sorts of plots. "I'll just have to have her put away," he sighs, "and rule the country as regent for our son."

Juana has a faithful band of Castillians on her side, but in a stirring meeting in the Cathedral of Burgos, her written proof of the husband's infidelity proves but a blank sheet of paper. The ambitious councilor has switched the incriminating evidence and it certainly looks, even to her friends, as though Juana has blown her top.

However, the noble didn't count on two unexpecteds: one of his tools, a glamorous Moorish princess hurls a knife at his back. Then Philip develops a fatal illness, which leads him to a deathbed confession of the plot against his wife. Ironically, Philip's death actually does set Juana out of her mind and she spends the rest of her days by the side of his coffin, hushing the courtiers to be still: "The King is sleeping."

All this is told to Juana's son, Don Carlos, at the time of his own accession and of his first visit to his mother in years. The narrator is a faithful captain who'd long loved the rattled Queen and numberless characters are fitted into the flashback.

The settings, costumes and details are immensely real and impressive and the brooding quality of the Moorish-Catholic nation, on the threshold of the sixteenth century, adds much to the credibility of the tale. A small booklet I've received vouches for the factual outline of this royal tragedy and I can only assume the Spanish film-makers haven't, in the usual movie sense, seduced history.

New Star Scores

Aurora Bautista, described as "the first lady of the Spanish theater," and making her screen debut in the part, is marvelously effective as the pathetic royal wife. She works up to several set-chewing scenes persuasively and the flashback technique allows her a few moments as a racked old lady. It's an impressive performance.

The others are accomplished players, too, and Director Juan de Orduna is to be congratulated on putting so complex a yarn effectively on celluloid, even though he lacks some of our technical facilities.

The English subtitles are adequate and I think you'll find "Madness of Love" quite a juicy adventure.

VISITOR'S REPORT: The Rev. Russell W. Annich, writing from Trenton, speaks in high praise of "Faith of Our Fathers." He writes: "While visitors in our Capital City, our family had the opportunity to enjoy the superb outdoor amphitheater in which this symphonic drama is being presented. One suggestion crossed my mind and that is that all those present should stand for the closing chorus, 'Faith of our Fathers.'"

THE CROSS ROADS Theater last night opened a two-week run of "Personal Appearance," starring Grace Pearson as the movie queen stuck in a Pennsylvania tank town, where she raises cain with a gas station attendant . . . Others in the cast include Dennis Marshal, Dick O'Neill, Nan Frutkin, Betty Rhame, Don Hopkins, Virginia Goodrich, Don Reeder and Pat Smith.

"MADNESS OF LOVE." Cifesa Producciones of Spain present an historical romance. Screen play by Manuel Tamayo, Alfredo Echegaray and Carlos Blanco. English titles by Herman G. Weinberg. Directed by Juan de Orduna.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

WASHINGTON is losing some of its best talent to Texas. Daryl Harpa, bandleader, composer and showman, has decided that a change of scenery is in order. Show people consider change all important—"so we can come back here fresh." Harpa's wife, Marna Paige, explains it.

The Harpa outfit has been here most of this year. This summer they've been making Wardman Park Hotel history by curing the Caribar of a perennial case of summer doldrums.

Earlier they put on several shows in the Old New Orleans Latin Quarter, and appeared earlier still in other Washington night spots.

"Outfit" is a short name for the band, Marna Paige, singer and dancer, a troupe of dancers, a comedian or two and a couple of special Latin American or Hawaiian (depending on the show's theme) native musicians.

Harpa has big ideas and lots of energy to go with them. His shows are always fast-moving and exciting. The theme differs—Spain, South America, Cuba or Hawaii may provide the inspiration. And one's individual taste may prefer one to another. Occasionally an ambitious routine may need a little more polishing. But there's always a masterly showman's touch behind them.

Marna Paige has a lovely voice and a smooth stage manner. She dances any type of number and her poise and loveliness always put it across. She recently turned down a contract with Xavier Cugat to stay with her husband's troupe.

Daryl Harpa and company will be at the Wardman's Caribar Room until the last of September. The present show is "Rhumbajura." The Cuban theme runs through it, with near-savage dances by Barbara and Jeff James, Maria Cardos and two members of the Katharine Dunham dance group, William Joyce and Russell Collquett.

OLMSTED'S popular and hospitable owner, James Brahms, was given a birthday party recently which was even bigger than the many he has planned for others.

His partner, Leonard Mitchell, prepared the feast at Luchow's, their restaurant in New York. The dinner started at 8 p. m. with a long list of appetizers, including black caviar and Swedish meat balls. Lobster bisque came next, followed by salmon with baked alaska.

The surprise of the evening was the extraordinary birthday cake. The immense confection had a huge center figure of Brahms. His arms were outstretched, and in one was a replica of Olmsted's, in the other, Luchow's.

British Expert Gives Tips on Raid Defense

Engineer Commissioner Gen. Gordon R. Young yesterday received a visit and some tips on civilian defense from a Britisher who should know about such things.

He was Sir Peirson Frank, chief engineer of the London County Council during World War II, and as such responsible for the maintenance and repair of roads, bridges and public utilities.

Sir Peirson is on a trip here with Sir Frank Newson-Smith, Lord Mayor of London during the war, William V. Gibson and H. Arthur Evans, all representing the Automobile Association of Great Britain.

Sir Peirson said he was forearmed for the blitz because he was required to make a report on the vulnerable points of London's public utilities some five or six years before the war.

This, he told guests at an American Automobile Association dinner at the Mayflower Hotel last night, was an aid when, as happened one night, 960 roads were partially or entirely closed by bombing. He described another raid in which one bomb knocked out 90,081 telephone wires which had to be rejoined correctly in a 6-square-foot manhole.

Sir Frank Newson-Smith said his group is impressed by America's wide roads, freeways for moving traffic in and out of cities, and by pedestrians here, whom he described as "very much more traffic-minded than in London where we have a great many jaywalkers."

side with slain Charles Binaggio, was indicted in an income tax case. He was charged with evading nearly $15,000 in taxes for 1944-48.

United States Attorney Sam M. Wear said Clark, Binaggio and others controlled the First Democratic Club. Binaggio and his henchman Charles Gargotta were slain last April 5. The case is unsolved.

In Miami, Attorney Ben Cohen promised to produce in court on Thursday the eight kingpins of the S & G Syndicate which did a $16 million dollar horse race betting business on Miami Beach. All were indicted on gambling charges after the syndicate's operations were laid bare here by the Kefauver committee.

One of the eight is Harry Russell, the Chicagoan who supposedly muscled in on the Florida group to take part of the profits for the Capone mob. Russell has been wanted by the Kefauver committee for several months now. If Cohen brings him to court this week, it will be his first public appearance since the crime investigation began.

Named to Head Reserve Police authorizing establishment of a reserve police unit. It was stated then that the force would be used to help police the inaugural parade for civil defense purposes, and generally to help out a shorthanded department. (The plan was shelved following public criticism.)

The 1948 order authorized Barrett to train a force and said the Commissioners could appoint its members special policemen for duty in the following situations: "During emergency of riot, pestilence, invasion, insurrection, or during any day of public election, ceremony or celebration."

Yesterday the Commissioners added "during the existence of a state of war" to the list and stipulated that only "citizens and residents" of the District could join the reserve force.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West said law forbids giving police powers to reserves except in these specific situations. He said he didn't know whether they could be called out to help cope with acts of sabotage. During their training reserves could accompany regular policemen touring their beats only as observers, he said.

West said he advised the Commissioners to use broad language in authorizing creation of the reserve force. "Its primary job is civil defense," West said, "but there may be other times when it will be needed." One time when they would have been useful was during the bonus army march in 1932, he said.

The Commissioners' action gives Barrett authority only to train the force, West added. The Commissioners must authorize its use. And the Commissioners may now appoint special police at any time.

"This merely provides for training in advance," West stated. "It's better to train them for the job now than to pick them off the streets when an emergency arises."

Barrett said the reserves will be recruited in batches of 50 to a precinct (700 men) and given "the best training possible."

He hopes ultimately—within two years—to have five volunteers for every beat man in the precincts and three for every detective. The theory behind the high ratio, Barrett said, is that "when you want a reserve policeman three or four will be at work or away where you can't get them."

Money is a big problem, Barrett said he wants uniforms for the reserves, but hasn't the money now to get them. Equipment available consists of 1500 badges and 2000 nightsticks left over from the reserve police force of the last war.

Barrett said he didn't know whether the reserves would be furnished arms. He would not comment on the question of whether reserves will be required to take a loyalty test.

Senate Votes 70 to 7 for Drastic Red Curbs rest Reds in case of "imminent invasion" or when Congress and the President declared an internal security emergency was stricken out.

Language proposed by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) stating nothing in the amendment should abridge any right guaranteed by the Fifth an Sixth Amendments, or suspend habeas corpus "unless in conformity with the Constitution," was also written into the plan.

In addition, the revised amendment underscored that no one be seized without a warrant, provided for speedy hearing of appeals, and further centralized responsibility in the Attorney General.

The sweeping Communist control provisions of the McCarran bill, which Mr. Truman has said he would not sign, were almost lost sight of in the maneuvering by liberals to put McCarran-Ferguson-Mundt forces on the political spot, and vice versa.

In the end, all the politicking came to naught. Most liberals voted right along with conservatives for the composite bill, in the mass play for an "anti-Red" voting record. About the only one left on the spot was President Truman, who must decide whether to try to kill the bill by a pocket veto or send it back to Congress for a probable over-rider.

The final flip flop in favor of modified "concentration camp machinery followed three separate roll call rejections of various forms of the plan.

In addition to two unsuccessful initial tries by Lucas, Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) moved to substitute the plan, together with Administration anti-sabotage recommendations, for the McCarran bill. The Kilgore substitute was rejected, 50 to 23.

Only three other material changes were made in the McCarran omnibus bill.

A McCarran provision, setting up a new, almost independent passport and visa division in the State Department, tied in with various intelligence agencies, was rejected 39 to 33. Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) led the fight against it.

An amendment by Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) providing for fines up to $5000 and one year in jail for demonstrators who picket Federal courts was approved by a voice vote.

By voice vote also, the Senate made the Red registration provisions of the McCarran measure almost identical with those in the White House-condemned Mundt-Ferguson bill.

Wrapped up in the McCarran bill together with the "tough" provisions were the limited security measures asked by the President: (1) Tightening the espionage act, (2) lengthening the statute of limitations on espionage violations from three to ten years, (3) requiring foreign-trained spies and saboteurs to register, and (4) strengthening present lax safeguards against sabotage of air bases and other military installations.

Some of the more sweeping anti-Red provisions of the McCarran bill are:

Require Communist political organizations and their members to register, and Red "front" groups to list their officers.

Requires them to label their literature as Communist propaganda.

Bar Communists from holding Federal jobs or receiving a passport.

Make it a crime to conspire to establish a totalitarian dictatorship in the United States.

Heavily penalizes passing of classified information to Communists and spies by Government employes, and those who seek or get such information.

Provides for exclusion and expulsion of subversives and prohibits immigration from countries which do not take back deportable aliens.

Authorizes the Attorney General to jail deportable aliens for six months and to keep them under supervision thereafter, with criminal penalties for violation of such supervision.

Makes so-called "second string" diplomats subject to deportation and exclusion laws.

Precludes naturalization while deportation proceedings are pending and makes a field investigation prerequisite to naturalization.

Requires a petitioner for naturalization to be able to read, write and speak "simple English."

Requires an oath to bear arms by an applicant for naturalization or, if he has religious scruples against this, an oath to perform non-combatant service.

Denaturalization of aliens who join subversive organizations within a specified time after they become naturalized.

A three-member subversive activities control board, appointed by the President, would decide whether organizations were Communist or "front" groups and, through the Attorney General, require them to register.

Individuals or groups listed with the Attorney General would have the right to appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Conviction for failure to register would carry penalties of from $2000 to $5000 in fines and from two to five years in prison.

Not a single Republican voted against the bill on final passage. Only these seven Democrats voted against it: Graham (N. C.), Green (R. I.), Kefauver (Tenn.), Leahy (R. I.), Lehman (N. Y.), Murray (Mont.), and Taylor (Idaho).

All of the Senators from this area, Byrd and Robertson of Virginia, and Tydings and O'Conor of Maryland, Democrats voted for it. O'Conor was named one of the Senate conferees to work out differences with the House. Others named to serve on the Senate conference committee were McCarran (D., Nev.), Eastland (D., Miss.), Wiley (R., Wis.), and Ferguson (R., Mich.), all favorable to the broad omnibus provisions.

Some of the Democrats who voted for the measure predicted, however, that more safeguards, to avert "smearing" of innocent persons, will be written into the registration section in conference.

Families to Frolic

A Family Frolic, featuring fun and friendship, will be sponsored by the Prince Georges County Camp Fire Girls from 3 to 8 p.m. Saturday at Grimm's Farm, 5109 Hollins ave., Seat Pleasant. Games, races and prizes are scheduled.

Manchuria Inquiry Is Vetoed by Soviet

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Russia used her forty-fifth United Nations veto today to kill an American proposal for an on-the-spot U. N. inquiry into Chinese Communist charges that American planes attacked Manchuria.

The Security Council then smothered a Soviet counter-proposal to condemn the United States for the alleged attacks against Manchurian targets.

The Soviet veto of the American proposal to send an Indian-Swedish inquiry group to look into the plane incident was the Kremlin's answer to the Council refusal yesterday to invite Peiping envoys to join debate on the idea.

Seven nations—exactly the majority required—voted in favor of the proposal. But Soviet Delegate Jacob A. Malik wiped out the majority with his veto power. India and Communist Yugoslavia abstained, while Nationalist China did not participate.

The Soviet proposal to condemn the United States drew only one supporting vote—from Malik himself. Yugoslavia abstained and again Nationalist Chinese Delegate Dr. Tingfu F. Tsiang did not participate.

The voting came at the end of more than four hours of debate that produced some of the most vitriolic exchanges between Russia and the United States since eruption of the Korean crisis.

Malik rejected the American contention that, though one F-51 "may have" hit targets in Manchuria, the attack was a mistake. He charged that the United States refusal to hear the Chinese Communists and its haste in pushing the inquiry plan could not help but leave the "impression" that the Manchurian incident was a "provocation prepared beforehand."

Austin Snaps Back

American delegate Warren R. Austin snapped back with the charge that Malik's statements were "insulting" to men who were fighting and dying for the U. N. in Korea.

After the voting, Council President Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain suggested that the group turn to its next item of business—the Formosan issue—next Monday.

But Malik wanted to push on immediately, and insisted that the Council start by taking up his proposal to invite Chinese Communist delegates here to participate in the Formosan debate.

Jebb agreed, but Malik insisted some delegates might want to make some comments on the issue—meaning himself.

The Chinese Nationalist delegate stepped in at that point to propose adjournment at once, and this was carried—eight in favor, only Malik against, and two abstentions.

Jebb then set the next meeting for Monday afternoon.

In debate preceding vote on the proposal to create a fact-finding group on the Manchurian incident, Malik charged that the United States hoped to slip espionage agents into China on the group's staff, if not in its main membership.

Earlier in the day, the U. N. received charges from North Korea that "barbarous bombing" by American planes had "completely destroyed" all heavy industry and most medium and light industry in Korea.

Malik's charges against the the United States in the Manchurian case provoked the strongest type of reply from Austin.

The American delegate said that behind Malik's false charges was the "evil desire of Russia's ruling circle" to divide the Council because it was "afraid to face the whole U. N."

"Thus," Austin added, "it (Russia) doesn't hesitate to hurl these bloody, obprobrious words of 'gangster,' 'murderer,' 'criminal,'"

Attlee Says

British Plan More Troops For Germany

LONDON, Sept. 12 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee announced today Britain will send several thousand more troops to Germany and divert other thousands of men into a hurry-up rearmament drive to guard against another Korea.

But Opposition Leader Winston Churchill said this was not enough. The Conservative chieftain demanded that a European army of at least 60 to 70 divisions be raised to close the "hideous gap" in Western defenses, and warned the Prime Minister to accept the fact that such an army "with a strong German quota is going to be raised quite quickly."

Attlee, however, turned thumbs down on the idea now of raising a German army.

Attlee said the two understrength British divisions already in Germany will be brought up to full fighting weight and a third combat division sent to join them. This meant Britain will have between 45,000 and 54,000 fighting men on guard on the West's front

Attlee further announced Britain will:

1. Build up her present 6½ regular divisions to 10, and organize 12 divisions of territorials, the British equivalent of the United States National Guard.

2. Expand her military industrial capacity to the fullest "without resorting to the drastic expedients of war economy."

3. Impose new austerity measures.

4. Divert 250,000 workers into arms production as part of a $10,080,000,000 defense program in the next three years in which financial and material help is expected from the United States.

5. Review government controls over the present export of goods of potential war value to Russia and the Cominform countries.

Tigers Shade Nats, 3-2, Take Lead as Yanks Lose

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—Eighteen months ago, Jake La Motta bustled up to Montreal for a soft-touch payday against a vaguely-known French middleweight name of Laurent Dauthuille. After the fight, Jake took the next train back to the Bronx practically incognito.

At least he couldn't be easily identified as Jake La Motta. His face was knocked out of shape, and resembled hamburger. His eyes were slits, and his lips cannotated what might have been a Ubangi heritage. Jake was also very much surprised. He had lost seven of the 10 rounds and the decision to Dauthuille.

Povich

A few months later, though, who should bob up as champion of all the middleweights but La Motta. Here in Detroit in the summer of 1949, he had the good luck to be in the ring with Champion Marcel Cerdan on a night when Cerdan threw his shoulder out of whack in the first round and had to yield the title in the tenth to La Motta by a technical knockout.

Jake's fighting again in Detroit tomorrow night, and the party of the second part is Dauthuille, and this time it's for the title. Those who know LaMotta best including the betting commissioners, have blithely made LaMotta a 2-1 favorite.

WITH ALL due regard for what happened to La Motta the last time he was in the ring with Dauthuille, there is no temptation here to write off Jake's title. One of the best-known maxims of the modern prize ring is: never bet against LaMotta in Detroit. It's almost like saying don't bet against the Red Sox in Boston.

Detroit is Jake's Fenway Park, his home grounds. He gets licked in other towns but Detroit somehow generates the best in him. Eighteen times he has fought in these precincts, and 17 times he won his fights. The only fight Sugar Ray Bobinson ever lost as a pro, he lost to LaMotta, in Detroit, of course. And that was no fluke. Jake had Sugar Ray on the floor just to make it more convincing..

Jake can get lucky, you know. It was agreed that he was a cinch to get licked by Marcel Cerdan in a return fight, and what happened? Jake came up with an injury that postponed the original date for the second fight. And after it was finally scheduled, Cerdan's plane from Paris crashed into a mountain in the Azores, and the title was LaMotta's to keep.

DAUTHUILLE is a blond-haired kid, 26, three years younger than La Motta, and notable among French fighters in that his wife doesn't sit at ringside. It's no accident that he punches in flurries like Cerdan did, because he was something of a protege of the late champion from France. Cerdan licked him twice, but he was freely predicting that "some day Dauthuille weel ween ze title."

The 15-round limit suits Dauthuille, too, says Max Waxman, his American representative. "Lucky for La Motta that Montreal fight didn't go 15," Waxman was saying today. "Jake wouldn't still be able to say he has never been knocked off his feet. We were catching up with him sure," he added with the managerial "we."

Attempting to assay that La Motta-Dauthuille fight tomorrow can become downright confusing, though. Among the guys who have licked Dauthuille is the Italian champ, Mitri, who was finally tossed in against La Motta a couple of months ago. Jake toyed with him, generously permitted Mitri to last the fight out in a sudden surge of compassion never before attributed to the Bronx Bull.

UNPOPULAR as he is in his home town of New York, Jake is somewhat beloved by Detroit fight fans. Maybe they like the way he stands squarely and drops both hands and dares the guy he's in with to hit him. Or the way he grimaces, and then gets violent, although many a fight judge takes a dim view of Jake's cute trick of fighting for only thirty second of each round.

Jake is not so all-fired cocksure that he is going to walk out of the ring the winner tomorrow, that he hasn't taken one precaution. He made the Frenchman post a $10,000 bond guaranteeing a return match if anything happened to La Motta's title .

A plane from New York will set down in Detroit sometime tomorrow, and Sugar Ray Robinson will pick up a ringside ticket to the fight. He'll fight the winner sometime within the next six months, and being the kind of fighter he is, will probably add the middleweight title to the Robinson Enterprises Inc., which already include the welterweight championship, apartment houses, a delivery service and a barber shop.

13,000 to See Title Fight

Jake LaMotta 9-5 Favorite To Whip Dauthuille Tonight

DETROIT, Sept. 12 (AP).—Squat Jake LaMotta, scenting a big money series with Ray Robinson, is a 9-5 favorite to whip Laurent Dauthuille of France tomorrow night in his second world middleweight title defense.

International Boxing Club officials expect a crowd of 13,000 and receipts of some $100,000 for the indoor fight at the Olympia. Approximately $50,000 is in the till.

The way was cleared today by the National Boxing Association for LaMotta or Dauthuille to meet Robinson in February. Even a LaMotta-Dauthuille rematch, if the Frenchman wins, will be permitted on the promise that the rematch winner will tackle Sugar Ray before March 13.

With his title at stake, LaMotta is a cagy, rugged warrior. You can throw out his over-the-weight fights. They don't mean much, including his loss to Dauthuille at Montreal in 1949. Jake didn't have the title then.

When LaMotta came to Detroit to fight the late Marcel Cerdan in June, 1949, for the title, few gave him a chance. But he won. Last time he breezed past Mitri, a conqueror of Dauthuille, at Madison Square Garden, in a 15-round defense.

No Video, No Radio

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—There will be no television or radio broadcast of the Jake LaMotta-Laurent Dautheville middleweight title fight.

Roberts Wins Over Cards, 1-0, on Blast By Seminick

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12 (AP). Young Robin Roberts won a brilliant 1 to 0 pitching duel from Max Lanier and the St. Louis Cardinals tonight to annex his 19th victory of the year and preserve the Philadelphia Phillies' six and one-half game National League lead.

The margin of victory was Andy Seminick's booming fifth inning home run. The Phils' catcher celebrated his 30th birthday to the joy of 20,864 fans.

Lanier gave up only two hits in seven innings of work while Roberts was touched for five safeties.

Blackwell Loses 1-Hit Game to Bums, 3 to 1

BROOKLYN, Sept. 12 (AP).—Ewell Blackwell of the Cincinnati Reds held the Dodgers to one hit today—a single by Gene Hermanski—but threw his own game away in a wild eighth inning in which the home team scored twice without hitting the ball out of the infield to win 3-1.

The victory ended a three-game losing streak for the second-place Brooks and likewise snapped Cincinnati's winning skein at five.

Blackwell opened the fateful eighth by hitting Catcher Bruce Edwards in the back with a pitched ball, and before it ended he had thrown wildly past first base, walked the Dodger pitcher, Carl Erskine, and uncorked a wild pitch.

Herman's More Conservative

Players, Assistants Put Ball On Spot With Redskin Raves

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

If Coach Herman Ball has his way, the speeches of his Redskins' players and assistant coaches probably will be censored from now on.

Yesterday they put him on a spot, forcing him to confess to 150 Advertising Club members and guests at a Statler luncheon "you can plainly see that unless we win all of our games, it will be nobody's fault but mine."

Ball, the last speaker, was put on the defensive by Sammy Baugh, Bill Dudley, Harry Gilmer, Wilbur Moore, Tommy Mont and George Marshall, all of whom spoke of the 1950 Tribe in glowing terms.

"We'll win every game this season," Mont, assistant backfield coach predicted. Mont, it should be explained, is just starting out as a coach.

Baugh called Rookie Halfback Hall Haynes "the best rookie defensive halfback I've ever seen in the league," and said the Redskins "were stronger than at any time in the last several years and will be in the fight all the way."

Gilmer, referring to himself as "the improved Harry Gilmer," told the Ad clubbers "This is the best Redskins' team in the three years I've been here, it's got wonderful spirit and we're going places."

Dudley, whom Marshall called the "greatest halfback in the history of professional football," allowed how glad he was to be with the Redskins, whom he said "will be hard to stop."

"I hope to play with the Redskins about half as long as Sam Baugh and be one fourth as rich as he is when I leave here," Dudley added.

Having heard nothing but praise for the team he guided to five exhibition victories without a defeat, Ball, by necessity, couldn't very well do anything but adhere to the general theme of the previous speakers. He did, but with a bit more caution.

"I'll promise one thing," he said, "the Philadelphia Eagles and the other teams who have been using plays against us that they couldn't work against the other teams won't find us the same club this season.

"As far as winning all our games, we're not concerned with that right now. The big one is the league opener against the Colts in Baltimore Sunday. You can't win 'em all unless you win the first one and that's our only objective at the moment."

Heurich Opens Play Today

Rain postponed all opening round games in the All-American Amateur baseball tournament yesterday and rearranged the schedule for today.

Heurich Brewers, defending champs, now will play the first game, meeting Allentown at 10 a. m. on the West Ellipse.

Heurich also will take part in the official opening ceremonies, starting at 7:30 p. m. in Griffith Stadium.

Here's the revised scheduled for games on the Ellipse today:

1. Heurich vs. Allentown, 10 a. m., West.
2. Maryland State vs. N. Y. Federation, 10 a. m., North.
3. Pittsburgh vs. Waterbury, 10 a. m., South.
4. Springfield vs. Brooklyn, 10 a. m., East.
5. Baltimore vs. Holyoke, 1 p. m., South.
6. Zanesville vs. Wilkes-Barre, 1 p. m., East.
7. Susquehanna vs. D. C. Police, 1 p. m., West.
8. Losers of games 3 and 4, 3:30 p. m., South.
9. Losers of games 5 and 6, 3:30 p. m., West.

Griffs 'Blocked' Out As Detroit Takes Over by Half Game

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

DETROIT, Sept. 12. — Dizzy Trout and his anxious teammates sweated out a hairline, 3-2, decision over the Nats today and hauled themselves into the American league lead, a half game ahead of the New York Yankees who lost to Cleveland.

Into the pennant-minded Tigers and their 5092 apprehensive fans, the Nats threw a solid fright only to blow the ball game in the seventh inning on a disastrous slide into the plate.

Trout, out-pitched in a sense by Gene Bearden and Mickey Harris who held the Tigers to five hits while the Nats were accumulating eight, got a big lift from his batterymate, Bob Swift, who took the innards out of a Washington rally in the seventh.

With the Tigers leading, 3-1, at that point, Pinch-Hitter Sherry Robertson singled to left with one out and Rookie Hal Keller delivered a smashing pinch-hit double into left center. Robertson, trying to score all the way from first, bogged down on the water-logged baselines.

Nevertheless Robertson had Lipon's relay to the plate beaten, but he never got there. The well-padded Swift executed a perfect block that left Robertson's groping spikes inches short of the plate, and put the ball on him for a big out. The Nats got nothing out of the inning.

The Tigers made the most of the four hits Bearden permitted 'em before he was relieved for a pinch hitter at the end of six. They mustered two big runs in the fourth after two were out, and Lipon had drawn a walk. George Kell got Lipon home with a two-bagger against the fence in left-center, and then Vic Wertz dropped another double in the same spot to give Trout a 2-0 lead.

Wertz clubbed what proved to be the decisive blow in the fifth. It was his twenty-seventh homer, whacked into the upper deck of right field.

The Nats set to work on that 3-0 deficit in the sixth after being held hitless for four innings by Trout. Ed Stewart led off with a single to right, and with two out, romped home on Sam Mele's double to right, pruning the Tigers' lead to 3-1.

Still challenging the Tigers after their abortive seventh-inning threat, the Nats pulled up to 3-2 quickly in the eighth when Ed Stewart walloped his fourth homer of the year off the facing of the upper deck in right field.

Mickey Vernon singled with one out later in the inning, but the Tigers got rid of that threat when Sam Mele bounced to Lipon or a double play.

Shortstop Johnny Lipon gave Trout a lift in the ninth with a stab of Michael's line drive, but with two out, Pinch Hitter Gil Coan gave the Nats' emergency sockers a 1.000 average for the day by dropping a single into left. It added up to nothing when Pinch Hitter Fred Taylor grounded to Kell for a game-ending force play at second.

IN SHORT . . . Coan, who pinch hit in the ninth, was making a surprise appearance. He was in a Washington hospital last night for observation after crashing into the left field fence yesterday, and flew into Detroit after the game started. . . . The Tigers were particularly happy about their victory. It put the heat on the Yankees at Cleveland . . . rookie Hal Keller, recalled from Augusta, broke in nicely with a bang as a pinch-hitter, a two-base bang. .

The "Game of the Day"

Today's "Game of The Day," to be covered by Shirley Povich, in the tight American League pennant race: Washington at Detroit.

Champs Ahead, 6-0, Before Indians Get to Reynolds

CLEVELAND, Sept. 12 (AP).—With two men out, Luke Easter belted a three-run, ninth-inning homer tonight to enable the Cleveland Indians to beat the New York Yankees, 8 to 7. The defeat shoved the Yankees into second place, one half game behind the Detroit Tigers.

The Yanks entered the inning, leading 7 to 4. Allie Reynolds, apparently riding to his 14th victory, got the first man out, then walked two men. Tom Ferrick, the Yanks' ace fireman, took over.

Bob Kennedy slashed a double to center, scoring Joe Gordon and moving Thurman Tucker to third. Larry Doby fanned for the second out. Then Easter socked his second homer of the evening over the right-field fence to end the game.

The astounding finish by a team famed more for blowing leads of late wiped out an early homer barrage by the Yankees. Joltin' Joe DiMaggio started it in the first with a three-run blast off Early Wynn.

In the second, Yogi Berra tagged a two-run homer after little Phil Rizzuto hit a four-bagger.

Cleveland cut the 6-0 deficit on a two-run homer by Larry Doby in the third and Easter's first round-tripper.

Marlboro Opens Today as Hy and Miss Prime Renew Rivalry

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks: At Marlboro.

This track will have two entrances for motorists this year instead of the usual one. Seems private interests beat Marlboro's sponsors to the punch and purchased the land adjacent to the railroad track on the new extension of the Crain highway on the bypass of the town. They are charging two bits, and I understand, will have valet service for a half buck. Parking on the track's spacious area is for free, as usual. The fifth and sixth races (post time, 4 and 4:30) will be aired on Chuck (WGAY) Dulane's sports program each day. Jockey Sammy Palumbo will be back for the cheers and boos after passing up Timonium for Wheeling. See you on the rail.

Thoroughbred horse racing, a sport in the area since the Revolutionary War days, returns to southern Maryland today. For the next 10 days rootin' hosses will vie with cuttin' tobacco as the chief activity down Marlboro way. Post time for the first race is 2 p. m.

The session, the second to be staged at the new Marlboro racing plant, marks the final phase of Maryland's minor track season. Although other ovals dropped in business volume in 1950, General Manager L. Ed. O'Hara and his associates believe Marlboro will top even last year's totals which set a new record—providing the Weather Man cooperates.

At this writing, it appears Marlboro will open with an off track. The course was sloppy at workout time yesterday. However, there was a hard bottom and horses were moving over it without difficulty.

The opening feature is The Savage Purse, a dash of 5½ furlongs for 3-year-olds and up. From a speed standpoint the race seems aptly named. Each of the nine horses listed over night has won one or more races this year.

The test will mark a renewal of the rivalry between Mrs. Henry Reighttler's Hy and J. N. Barnes' Miss Prime, which was one of the highlights of the recent Timonium meeting. In their last clash, Hy had to equal the track record to win by a scant margin from the "1950 Queen of the Minor Tracks."

However, Miss Prime gets in light today for her battle with the daughter of Dog Show, providing Mrs. George A. Saportas, jr., her trainer, elects to retain the jockey apprentice allowance.

Brownell's 68 Wins Medal in D. C. Amateur Golf

Jankowski, Bogart Tie For 2d at 72

Bobby Brownell, who has won the title five times, shot a three-under par 35—33—68 to win medalist honors in the District Amateur golf championship yesterday at Congressional Country Club.

The Chevy Chase star finished four strokes ahead of Mike Jankowski, Prince Georges, and Ralph Bogart, Chevy Chase, who had 72s.

Brownell scored four birdies, each as the result of one-putt greens. He was below par on the first, fifth, sixteenth and 18th holes, ramming in a 19-footer for his final birdie.

His only bogie came on the seventh hole of the water-logged course. He missed his second putt by inches and took a five on the 422-yard hole.

Brownell has won the title all five times he's played in the tournament. His first victory came in 1936 as a high school senior. Following a 10-year layoff while he attended Duke University and later served in the F. B. I., Bogart returned to District play and recaptured the championship in 1946.

Last Year's Sophs Look Good

Wake Forest May Be Conference Surprise

(This is another in a series of articles on area and Southern Conference football teams.)

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Sept 12.—In the Durham-Raleigh district there are four Southern Conference football powers. Wake Forest is rated third among them—behind Duke and North Carolina, and ahead of North Carolina State.

Herb Heft

It's a rating which suits Wake Forest Coach Peahead Walker to his size 7½ hat. He's in an excellent position to produce the surprise team of the conference.

Last year, his Deacons were touted as the team to beat. It turned out they were the team practically everybody beat. Racked by dissension among the juniors and publicized sophomores, the Deacs lost six games, four of them by one touchdown.

It could be a different story this fall. Most of the trouble-making juniors of last year are gone. Six of them in particular. Last year's sophs have matured into sound T-formation players, and there is a new crop of sophs making a bid for regular positions.

The Deacs appear to be loaded with good backs, and good defensive linemen. But Walker is finding he's a little thin in good offense linemen.

It's a big team that has no big names. It's loose and confident, free from the pressure of its billing of a year ago. And it reflects the fun-loving, want-to-win personality of its colorful coach, Walker.

THE DEACS BOAST the smallest quarterback in the conference in 145-pound Dickie Davis, a junior from Wilson, N. C. and they aren't apologizing for him either. He's a standout passer, and a fair runner and punter with lots of courage.

He looks down the throats of opposing 200-pounders, and dares them to come and crush him. When they rush in, he gives them a double dipsy because he is double-jointed.

Davis will be pitching and handing off to such speedsters as William (Nub) Smith, junior from Fayetteville, N. C.; Joe Koch (pronounced Cook), sophomore of Jersey City; Bob Jones, junior of Laurinburg, N. C.; Bill Miller, junior of Suffield, Conn., and Bobby Stutts, junior of Burlington, N. C.

Smith is perhaps the most spectacular and most promising of them all. In all his high school days, he was rated as the "Next Charlie Justice." As a Wake Forest soph., Nub was an in-an-outer.

He played his best game against William and Mary, gaining 246 yards running. He uncorked scoring runs of 58, 75 and 54 yards

KOCH, AT 192 pounds, is the strongest and one of the most colorful backs. Last month, he and another soph, Joe Gaona, 220-pound center from Ambridge, Pa., were visiting friends in Franklinton, N. C. when a carnival passed through town.

One of the features was a 200-pound trained wrestling gorilla. The trainer offered a dollar to anyone who could stay a minute with the ape.

Koch volunteered, and threw the ape, really, in five minutes. Gaona tried his luck, and stayed seven minutes before the trainer stepped in and called it a draw. The boys collected 12 bucks. But the circus kept the gorilla for top billing.

Besides doing a lot of the ball-carrying this season, Koch will do most of it punting. For the frosh, Koch averaged 46 yards last fall.

Gaona has been looking so good in practice, he may be elevated over last year's regular, Jim Zrakas, who is back.

There are a couple of Yankee boys from Baltimore making good on this southern club. Both are products of Patterson Park High.

Auffarth, a theology major at the Baptist school, preaches on Sunday. He's a Methodist, but gets along fine with the coaches, players and professors because he's the best defensive player on the squad.

WALKER WAS A little worried when practice started that the Deacs would be weak at ends. Red O'Quinn and Jim Duncan, two of the leading pass grabbers in the South, and Ed Bradley, a god defensive flankman, graduated. He couldn't lose all of them and not feel it.

But two sophomores are coming along very nicely at the ends. Jack Lewis, another former All-America highschooler from Ramsas, Ala., has a lock on right end. He's 6 feet, 2 inches tall, weighs 190 pounds. Against South Carolina's frosh last fall he caught eight passes, three for touchdowns.

Ed McClure, a 175-pounder from Waynesburg, Pa., can also catch 'em, but he goes in for defensive play particularly.

Walker claims he doesn't have enough manpower to use the two-platoon system. So his starting lineup will probably be McClure and Lewis at ends, Listopad and Jim Staton, a 235-pounder from Greensboro, N. C., at tackles; Auffarth and Claude Pickard, 205-pounder from Burlington at guards, and Gaona at center.

The backfield will be Davis at quarter, Smith and Jones at the halfbacks and Miller at full. When Carroll Blackerby recovers from a broken collar-bone suffered the other day, he'll relieve Davis of some of the passing. But Blackerby will probably miss Wake Forest's first three games.

The Deacs open against Boston College September 23, then meet Richmond, W & M, North Carolina, George Washington, Clemson, Duke, N. C. State, and North Carolina.

(Tomorrow NORTH CAROLINA)

Dot Porter Ousted on 19th Hole

ATLANTA, Sept. 12 (AP).—Mrs. Dorothy Germain Porter, whose putter seldom before needed more than two strokes per green, lost out in defense of her National Amateur crown today to Mrs. J. Albert Hayes, practically an unknown to tournament golf.

The putting miseries of Mrs. Porter ended on the 19th hole of the second round when her ball stopped 6 inches short on a 4-foot putt. Mrs. Hayes, who ranks only as the third member of the Philadelphia Country Club team, dropped her putt for a four par and the 1-up victory.

Mrs. Porter was the first of the top-ranking favorites to tumble from the golden anniversary national. Dot Kirby, Atlanta's big entry who has been ill, defeated Carol Clark, Wyoming, Ohio, 4-2, and Polly Riley, the stocky Fort Worth, Tex., Southern and Western Amateur champion, whipped Mary Agnes Wall, Minominee, Mich., 6-5.

Dot Kielty of Long Beach, Calif., had the same happy results over little Barbara McIntire, Toledo, and Fay Crocker, Montevideo, Uruguay, blasted Mrs. Ralph I. Raynor, Jenkintown, Pa., 7-5.

Rowboat Anglers Defy Rain, Catch Spot Between Showers

By Ralph Murdock

THE PISCATORIAL ambitions of most local anglers were literally squelched by heavy rains last Saturday and Sunday—both fresh and salt water fishermen were affected by the young cloudbursts.

Murdock

About the only anglers who achieved any degree of success were the rowboat fishermen who sneaked out between showers and took potluck close to the shore.

Here are some of the small boat anglers who went out from Gus Berlitz's Marine Anchorage and their catches: Lloyd Legge, Hyattsville, Md., one flounder, one black sea bass and 67 spot; Hubert Harmon, from Seventh Precinct, Metropolitan Police, who nabbed 35 spot; Victor Newton who boated 53 of the same species and Ed Melicka who also captured spot, 20 of 'em.

The king-size white perch taken on the edge of sandbars last year are again making their appearance in small numbers and may prove the "fish of the fall" as far as bottom angling is concerned. Harvey Haight of Bethesda caught six last Monday, a couple of hundred yards off Franklin Manor in Herring Bay. The largest was just under 2 pounds.

SUNDAY WE FISHED out of Breezy Point with Captain Nathan (Funny) Parks on the Gannet. Our trip wasn't hilarious, from a fishing standpoint, for we caught only three blues and one striper. However, our guide really deserved a "Big E" for effort. He never gave up trying to locate the fish, but they just never showed. Will try him again.

Another boat from the same location, piloted by Ned Lampston, with a party of four District fishermen aboard, had good luck at Sharp's Light while still fishing. They garnered 300 spot and six trout, using bloodworms for bait. The anglers then moved down to James' Point, where 15 pan-size rock were hauled in while trolling.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Defense Jobs to Absorb Most Workers Affected By Cutbacks in Budget

Only minor reductions in Federal personnel will be necessary as a result of the cutback in nondefense spending ordered by the Budget Bureau.

The best estimate is that the actual overall reduction won't top 10,000 employes—while most of the employes slated for firings will be transferred to defense jobs, many of them within their agencies.

The nondefense cutback of 10,000 employes is contrasted with the planned expansion of 300,000 employes in the Army, Navy and Air Force alone. Furthermore, thousands of additional new employes will be hired for defense activities in the old-line agencies.

In fact, a top Federal personnel official now privately predicts that Federal employment will be increased upwards of 500,000 within the next year.

In approving the 36-billion-dollar general appropriation bill, the Congress directed the Budget Bureau to cut nondefense items by a minimum of 550 million dollars. The proposed $62,500,000 loan to Spain authorized in the bill is not being considered as a part of the 550 millions even though the Administration has no intentions of going through with it. No specific fund is carried in the bill for the Spanish loan. Among the cuts ordered were the following:

Agriculture: 100 millions in the loan programs of REA and Farmers Home, plus 46 millions in other operations from building forest trails to scientific projects. Commerce: 92 millions in Maritime ship construction; 23 millions on Public Roads projects; 15 millions on CAA's airport construction program, and six millions from all other Commerce activities, a total of 136 millions.

Interior: Cut nearly 70 millions, mainly on reclamation, irrigation, and public power projects. About 15 millions would be cut from other programs in the department. Army: Its civil functions were cut 100 millions for rivers and harbors work. Federal Security: Cut 90 millions; 75 millions for hospital grants, and 15 millions for all other activities.

VA: Cutback a minimum of 5 millions in its administrative fund. General Services: Cut 19 millions, nearly all of it for Federal building projects. Housing Agencies: slashed a total of 40 millions which will bring about lay-offs at Federal Housing, a damper of Public Housing activities, and some cutbacks at Housing & Home Finance.

Civil Service: cut $500,000. Post Office: minor reductions. State: reductions only in its building projects. Justice: minor cuts.

Many of the reductions are likely to prove to be "paper" cuts. For example, a request is being made for additional public roads money to carry out a bill recently voted by Congress. Congress is debating a deficiency appropriation of $1,800,000 for Civil Service, etc.

CEILINGS OUT: The Budget Bureau yesterday was relieved of the job of telling each agency every theree months how many employes it could have. The budget and accounting bill, signed into law yesterday by the President, repealed the personnel ceiling law.

TAXES: The tax increase bill voted by the Senate carries a jolt for Federal workers who are employed in United States possessions such as the Canal Zone, Guam, etc. It will require them to pay Federal income taxes for the first time.

JUSTICE: Turner L. Smith yesterday was appointed first assistant to Assistant Attorney General Lamar Caudle in charge of the Tax Division. Meyer Rothwacks was promoted to Smith's old job as chief of the criminal unit. NOTES: Edward W. Fisher has been promoted to chief counsel of the Reclamation Bureau. He succeeds Clifford E. Fix who is resigning to practice law in Twin Falls, Ida. . . . Andrews Air Force Base has openings for parachute and clothing repair specialists, $1.36 an hour, and aircraft sheet metal repairer, $1.50 an hour. Get full details at the personnel office there . . . Civil Service today will accept applications for a new test for policewoman, $3077 starting salary, for openings in the police department here . . . Frank A. Banks, builder of the Grand Coulee Dam and other major Reclamation projects, is retiring from Government after 44 years of superior service.

Brewster's Aide Denies Phone Call By Shimon

Mrs. Frances Dustin's Testimony at Wiretap Inquiry Conflicts With Policeman's

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Mrs. Frances Dustin, administrative assistant to Senator Brewster (R., Me.) yesterday gave testimony which conflicted on two points with earlier sworn statements of Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon.

In a clear, precise voice, she told the Senate Subcommittee investigating the wire tapping activities of the policeman that:

1. She had handed an envelope of cash to Shimon, on Brewster's orders, in payment for his expenses at the Mayflower and Carlton Hotels. But she emphatically denied Shimon's testimony that he had talked to her over the telephone twice.

2. She said she first knew of Shimon coming to the Senator's office to check his telephone for a possible tap in September, 1947, and it also was in September that she gave him the envelope.

Shimon has said under oath that he engaged the hotel rooms in July and August of 1947 to conduct his wire tapping in connection with trailing Brewster's reputed "shadow."

The Washington Post
MRS. FRANCES DUSTIN
. . . Differs with Shimon

Shimon had told the subcommittee he was sent to the Senator's office during the July-August period and began immediately to trail the supposed "shadow."

Mrs. Dustin said she had no idea how much money was in the envelope, but considered it a "routine matter."

Under brisk questioning, she said she always paid Brewster's office bills and that Shimon's payment was the "only time I recall paying cash for the Senator. We have a checking account in Maine," she said.

The senatorial aide also told how Henry (the Dutchman) Grunewald, reputed Capitol Hill link with Shimon, visited Brewster at his office one or two times a week, and sometimes less often, during the last three or four years "and perhaps longer."

Acting Chairman Neely then recalled Grunewald to the witness stand and again gleaned little information from the former Pan-American Airways investigator.

Grunewald said he had seen the Senator on a matter in no way connected with the present wiretapping inquiry.

Advised Not to Answer

His attorney, William Power Maloney, advised his client not to answer a question on how often he saw Brewster, shouting "I will resist the committee's attempt to pry into his private affairs." This was the ground for refusal to answer nearly a dozen committee questions yesterday and Monday.

Grunewald flatly denied he did any work with Shimon or Brewster or Pan American Airways during the 1947 Hughes hearings.

After a prolonged tangle with Maloney over the phraseology of a question put by Neely, the Senator recessed the hearing until today at 10 a. m. with former boxer Grunewald the only witness listed.

Later Neely told a reporter the committee "will have to proceed against Grunewald if the testimony continues the same way."

The Senator had reference to his threat Monday to cite Grunewald for contempt for refusal to answer questions.

Maloney has taken the position committee questioning has extended the proper scope of the inquiry and that the witness will willingly answer questions on wire tapping activities in the Disrtict.

The subcommittee did learn one thing new about Grunewald.

"I'm a Democrat, if that is any news to you," he told Neely, with a broad smile on his square face.

"Well," Neely quipped, "I only hope you are not as hard to find on election day as you have been recently."

The FBI and the Senate investigators had been looking for Grunewald since early August. The Federal agents served a sub-

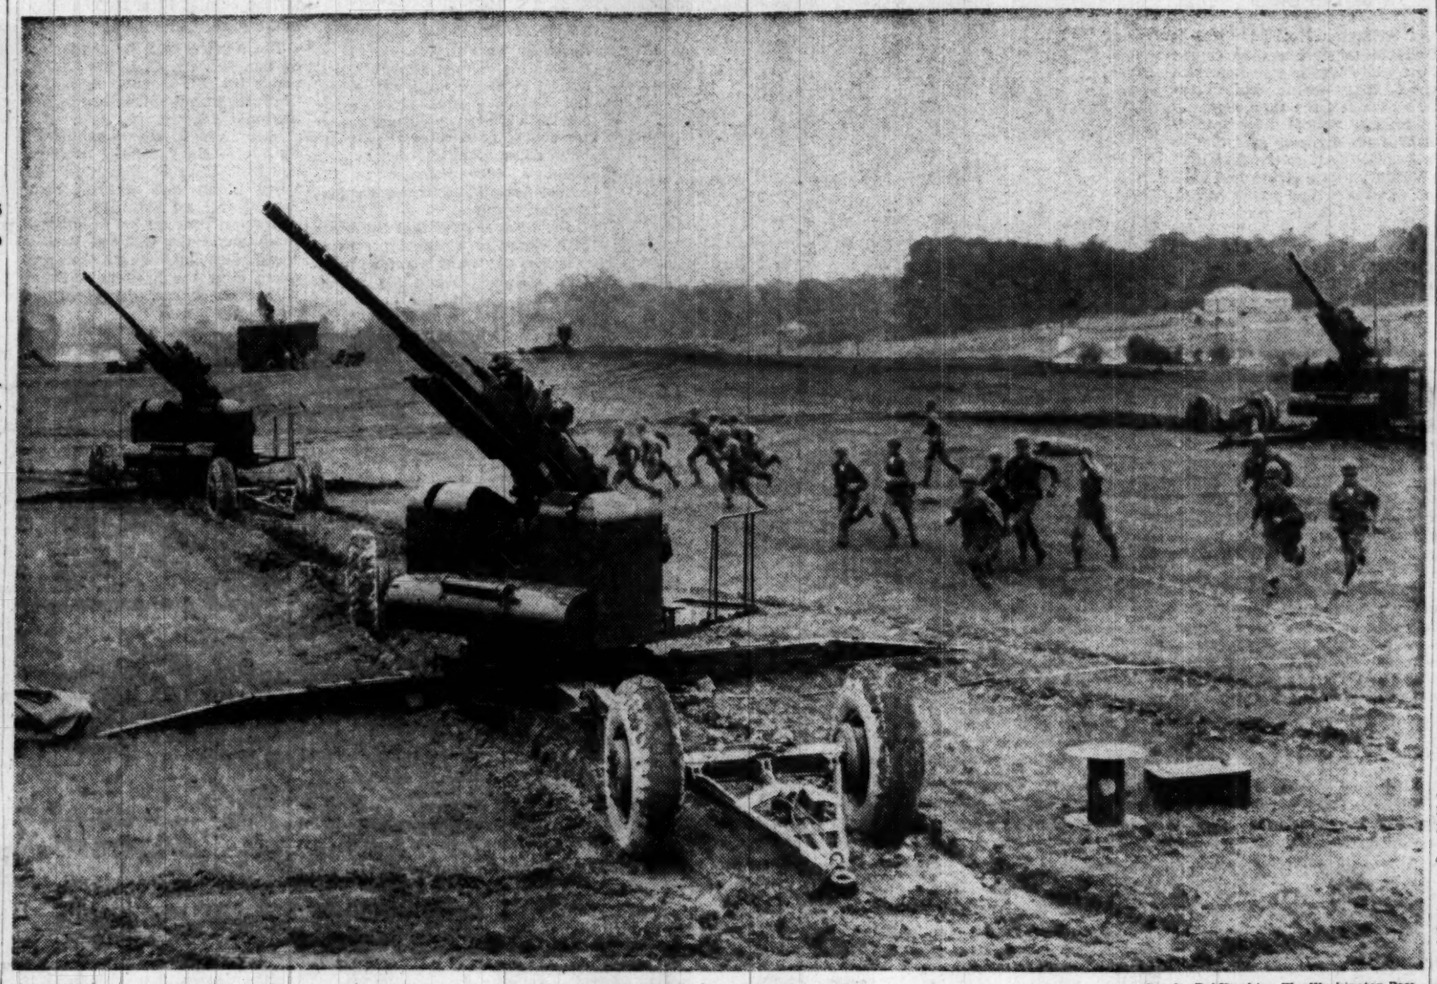
Scattered Rains Slow D. C. Anti-Aircraft War Games



Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post
ALERTED BY "APPROACH" OF "ENEMY" PLANES, GIs HERE PRACTICE TAKING POSITIONS AT ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERY

Weather yesterday hampered "Operation Metro," the war-game ring of anti-aircraft defenses set up to protect Washington from theoretical air attack.

Because of scattered rain, an Army spokesman said, it took longer than expected for the Thirty-fifth Anti-Aircraft Artillery Brigade to set up some of its gun emplacements.

Metro consists of a ring of eight anti-aircraft batteries in nearby Maryland and Virginia. In addition, there are 10 radar posts and 16 observation posts. Some of these observation posts are in the District.

Washingtonians will see some of the 2000 GIs involved in Metro.

A battalion command post, for example, has been set up near the Washington Monument.

A typical battery emplacement is in an open field near Annandale, Va.

It consists of four .90 millimeter anti-aircraft guns, multiple .50 millimeter machineguns, radar and an electric computer.

The exercise here is the first of eight "Metros" that will be set up in various parts or the country. Basically, the problem involved is the defense of a metropolitan area.

In Washington's case, the Ft. Meade units are assuming that a hostile force has captured the Carribean and has established bomber bases.

There will be no bombs dropped and no shells fired in Metro.

The "enemy" bombers will consist of not more than three planes—most often just one. To test the Thirty-fifth's preparedness, the "attacks" will come as a surprise.

The Thirty-fifth has been given a week's intensive training in preparation for Metro. Personnel and equipment began moving into Washington area locations late Monday and early yesterday.

Arlington Case

Electrician Charged in Home Looting

An acquaintance he struck up on a train last month ended in a charge of breaking and entering for a 30-year-old New York electrician yesterday.

His acquaintance, Mrs. Juanita Cassidy, 50, of 3137 Key blvd., Arlington, a widow, was instrumental in having the charge filed after her home was looted of jewelry, including some antique watches, worth $5000, last week.

Mrs. Cassidy said she met the electrician, Joseph DeMarco, on August 28, on a train bound from Charlotte, N. C., to Washington.

She said they played cards to break the trip. When the train arrived here, DeMarco took her to breakfast, escorted her home, and then, after checking in at a downtown hotel, began calling on her frequently, Mrs. Cassidy said.

On the night of September 7, while Mrs. Cassidy was away from her home, police charge DeMarco went there, broke glass panels beside the door, entered and left with her jewelry.

Mrs. Cassidy reported the loss to police last Saturday. They suggested she have another date with DeMarco Sunday.

Mrs. Cassidy kept Arlington police informed of the couple's progress during the evening. Detectives arrested him on the street and he waived extradition.

Police said DeMarco told them the jewelry was in a storage locker at Union Station. It has been recovered.

DeMarco is being held in lieu of $2500 bond for a preliminary hearing Friday at 9:30 a. m. in Arlington County Court.

'Friendly' Judge Acts Kindly to 'Unfriendly' Toper

"Some people," said Judge Hugh Reid, "become friendly under the influence of liquor and others want to clean up the world."

Joseph Armfield, 34, to whom he was talking in Arlington County Court, had to agree. "I wish I was one of the friendly kind."

Because Armfield, of Mt. Airy, Md., wasn't the friendly kind, Judge Reid yesterday fined him $5 on a charge of being drunk and $20 on an assault charge and sentenced him to 30 days in jail, but suspended the sentence.

Armfield was arrested September 8 near the Washington Lee shopping center on N. Washington blvd. on a charge of being drunk and for assaulting police Pvt. B. E. Keyes. Police said Armfield kicked the policeman in the stomach.

Candidates on View At Rally Tonight

Senate Unit Votes Funds For Airport

Fairfax County Area Likely; Specific Site Still to Be Decided

The Senate Appropriations Committee has approved a $2,150,000 appropriation for land purchase and engineering work for the proposed new Metropolitan Washington civil airport, it was reported yesterday.

The airport, authorized in a bill signed by the President Friday, is expected to cost more than fourteen million dollars and will probably be located in Fairfax County, Virginia.

The specific site will probably be decided in December. The Civil Aeronautics Authority does not expect the airport to be ready for even partial operation until 1954 or 1955.

Meanwhile, the Airport Use Committee, composed of representatives of Government, industry and military departments, received testimony on the present traffic at Washington National Airport.

In the first day of a three-day meeting here, the committee heard Stanley Seltzer, chief controller of air traffic control at the airport, report that 523 landings and takeoffs were made September 1, which he described as an ordinary day.

Eric von Hausswolff, deputy chief of the CAA's airport planning division, told the committee that the number of passengers using the National Airport had increased 19 percent from 1948 to 1949 to a total of 1,400,000. There were 173,000 operations at the airport, of which 73 percent involved air carriers, he said.

Bennett H. Griffin, director of the airport, said the possibility of any expansion in operations now is "very limited."

The committee, whose chairman is Robert N. Cook of the CAA, will resume its hearing at 9:30 a. m. today at the Capital Airlines board room in Hangar 3 at the airport.

Young Republican Club of District Elects Adams

G. Kenneth Adams, jr., a publicist for the Republican National Committee, has been elected president of the Young Republican Club of the District of Columbia.

His election, by the organization's board of directors, followed the resignation of Gilbert Hahn. Hahn resigned because of the press of business.

Adams was immediate past president of the Young Republican Club. He resumed leadership Monday night immediately after the board of directors' selection.

Personnel Board Change

District Commissioners yesterday appointed J. Thomas Kennedy, District director of weights, measures and markets, to replace District Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson on the District Personnel Board. Pearson said he had asked to be relieved because of the press of business in his office.

President Asks $25 Millions For School Construction Aid

President Truman sent to Congress yesterday a request for $25,190,000 in school construction aid for districts where enrollments have been swollen by an influx of Federal workers.

The President's action was in anticipation of the passage of S 2317, a bill authorizing the program. The bill has been approved by the Senate and a conference report is expected to come before the House today.

The construction measure provides for a three-year Federal aid program with funds allocated on the basis of emergency of need.

Nearly 600 Communities

Preliminary studies indicate the sum requested by the President would grant aid to from 70 to 80 of the nearly 600 communities eligible under a formula set forth in the bill.

The counties surrounding Washington probably would be ruled out by the "emergency of need" provision until more money was appropriated.

The amount requested by the President includes $21,500,000 for construction of the most urgently needed facilities, three million dollars for surveys of school facilities by the states, and $690,000 for administration of the program.

A Complex Formula

The bill would grant aid to school districts under a complex formula that would take into consideration the number of children whose parents live and work on Federal installations.

A companion bill, HR 7940, providing for school operating funds in the Federally impacted areas, also is before Congress. The bill, approved by the House and reported out by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, is expected to come before the Senate today. Earlier this month President Truman requested a $23,347,000 appropriation to finance this program.

Mother Seeks Army Release Of War-Bound Under-Age Son

A Takoma park mother is working desperately today to get back her under-age Korea-bound son while she sadly commemorates the anniversary of the death of another son who fell in love with the service prematurely.

On September 1, Paratrooper Spencer Oxford called his mother, Mrs. Hilda Oxford, 6511 Allegheny rd., Takoma Park, Md., from Camp Campbell, Ky.; "Mom, our outfit is hot. We can't talk," he said.

From California the day before yesterday came a letter. "Mom, I hope you won't worry. I didn't want anybody to call me chicken," it read.

Mrs. Oxford is worrying and she wants her son out of the Army. And unless he's back in the country before September 24, she won't get him. Army people are skeptical, Mrs. Oxford reports sadly.

In February, 1948, Mrs. Oxford's 14-year-old, Billy Edward, joined the Air Force, went to Alaska. Mrs. Oxford got him out after a year, but in a few months, on September 13, 1949, Billy Edward died of stomach cancer.

In June, 1949, Spencer found his 16-year-old feet itching and joined the Army without his mother's permission. They put him in the chaplain's office at Walter Reed and Mrs. Oxford reluctantly went along with his wishes.

Two months ago, Spencer went down south to paratrooper school, his Army goal.

Graduation was August 25, and then came the September 1 call from Camp Campbell. Mrs. Oxford went into action immediately.

She sent a registered letter with her son's birth certificate to the Army. For some reason it didn't get there. Mrs. Oxford had one delivered by hand on September 5.

Yes, the Army told her, they'd let her son out. Mrs. Oxford kept plugging, kept getting reassurances, she said, but meanwhile her son was moving west.

On Monday, a major called to tell her that her son was on a ship bound for the Far East, three days out.

Spencer must be in the United States to be discharged for being under age. On September 24, Spencer comes of age, 18, and may legally be reinducted into the Army.

Citizens' Group Expert Protests Gas Rate Boost

Vernon V. Baker, rate expert of the Federation of Citizens Associations, yesterday presented for filing in the United States Court of Appeals a brief protesting the attempted $750,000 annual rate boost granted the Washington Gas Light Co.

The brief was not immediately filed since it contains 86 pages, 36 more than allowed by the rules of the court.

Baker, in an earlier phase of the action, got a District Court injunction preventing application of the rate increase granted by the Public Utilities Commission last November. The utility company has appealed.

Greenbelt Wife Missing After Spat With Spouse

The mother of a 28-year-old Greenbelt, Md., woman yesterday asked police to broadcast a lookout for her daughter, missing since August 19, for fear she may be sick or the victim of foul play.

Police said the daughter, Mrs. Bernice Olive Main, left home at 38-A Ridge rd. at 4 a. m. August 19, following an argument with her husband, a Hyattsville bartender. She was first reported missing by her husband August 26.

Restoration Of D. C. Funds Is Indorsed

Senate Committee Votes Defense, Day Center Appropriations

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday voted to restore the bulk of the cuts made by the House in the District's part of the supplemental appropriation bill.

All in all, as reported by several Senators after the closed-door meeting, the committee voted back $436,600 of the $547,000 cut by the House.

In addition to restoring the full $290,000 asked for civil defense, these were the major committee actions:

1. The full $100,000 for continuing the day care centers was restored. The House had slashed the funds to $30,000 and ordered the centers liquidated despite recent congressional action to continue them for three years. The Senators knocked out the liquidation provision.

2. The full $68,500 asked by the Commissioners was granted to repair the city's Upshur st. tuberculosis sanitarium. The House had refused any funds and the hospital faced a possible shutdown this winter because of defective boilers.

3. The full $113,100 asked by the District rent control office was granted instead of the $75,000 voted by the House.

The committee has not yet completed voting on other provisions of the bill. The measure is due for floor consideration in a few days. A Senate-House conference will have to compromise differences.

School Rolls Up by 2700 In Fairfax

Fairfax County's school population has increased by 2700 pupils over last year, according to figures compiled at the end of the second day of the current term.

Reports from the county's 37 schools for the day ending last Wednesday show a total enrollment of 15,311 against a figure of 12,531 reported at the same time a year ago, School Superintendent Wilbert T. Woodson said yesterday.

The increase is much more than had been anticipated, Woodson said, and further complicates the problem of overcrowding in the county schools. At the start of the year, school officials had estimated the enrollment would be "something in excess of 14,000."

With registration figures still incomplete, the tentative totals show the heaviest percentage of increase to be at the Fairfax High School and Groveton Elementary School. The high school has 1315 students against a total of 919 at this time last year, while Groveton has reported an enrollment of 1010 in comparison to 789 a year ago.

Senate Unit Approves $290,000 Raid Fund

Commissioners Veto Siren Ban; 100,000 Would Leave D. C. Under Dispersal Plan

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

These things happened yesterday on Washington's civilian defense front:

1. The Senate Appropriations Committee approved the full $290,000 asked by the city to get the local program started. The House had slashed the request to a mere $30,000.

2. District Commissioners decided against banning use of sirens on emergency vehicles so that sirens would become air raid alarms only. Such a ban has just gone into effect in New York.

3. Testimony was made public that the President's dispersal plan for Washington, now before Congress, eventually would mean 75,000 to 100,000 workers would be moved from the District. Some agencies eventually would be permanently moved, although that is not now contemplated.

4. The need for office space for the mabilization program already is so pressing the Government is considering using its condemnation power to take over two new private buildings, one of them the Cafritz Building on K st. nw. The other was not named.

The Senate Committee action in restoring the civil defense funds, if approved by Congress, would mean Washington will get at least a good start on the problem. Much more money will be needed later on, according to Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young.

City-Wide Survey

Young has testified that he plans a city-wide survey "to determine to what extent existing structures as they are or with very cheap modifications can be used for protection against bombing attacks."

The Commissioners, according to Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, acted on the siren proposal after hearing objections by heads of the police and fire departments. General Young also opposed the idea.

Stofberg quoted Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew as saying removal of sirens from fire trucks would slow down their response to fire alarms.

Fondhal, General Young and other city officials yesterday discussed a possible air raid warden system with Max Schwartz who headed the system during World War II. Schwartz was asked for recommendations on organization and training.

The Senate committee yesterday did not reach the section of the supplemental appropriation bill to which President Truman has asked that the $139,800,000 dispersal program be added. It may be reached today.

Larson Testifies

Testimony made public yesterday included that of General Services Administrator Jess Larson and W. E. Reynolds, Public Buildings Commissioner.

Larson indicated four dispersal centers in Maryland and Virginia would be used to house the executive office of the President, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and "the attendant essential military personnel to carry on that operation," the FBI and the Central Intelligence Agency. The CIA already has asked to be moved out of the city.

Larson confirmed a story in The Washington Post of August 31 that one of the buildings would be available for Congress.

It was Larson who said that the complete plan (for 10 or 12 such building centers) contemplates moving 75,000 to 100,000 people out of the downtown area. The first four sites would be used by about 40,000.

Reynolds testified that $3,300,000 of the requested funds is needed at once to rent 550,000 square feet of office space. He also asked legislation to speed up by overtime work the General Accounting Office building construction to provide its 800,000 square feet in six instead of 14 or 15 months.

Records Taken

McNayr, Lee Tiff Over Housing Data

Charges that Col. E. Brooke Lee, former chairman of the Montgomery County Housing Authority, has taken records of the housing agency were made yesterday by County Manager Irving G. McNayr in a report to the Montgomery County Council meeting in Rockville, Md., yesterday.

McNayr said he had been informed that Colonel Lee obtained the records sometime early in September. He said he had called Lee and had been informed that Lee was having them photostated. McNayr said he had sent a registered letter demanding return of the records by 5 p. m. yesterday. The records were not returned. McNayr's letter said that legal action would be taken if the records are not returned.

Colonel Lee said last night that he has the records and is having photostats made of them to protect himself from "character assassination." He said: "Then, if I can be satisfied that the county is legally entitled to them, I will return them."

Following McNayr's report, Philip Schiff, of Chevy Chase, chairman of the citizen's advisory committee on housing, which was named by the county council to replace the housing authority headed by Colonel Lee on July 1, appeared before the council.

Schiff said that his committee's report had not been prepared for presentation to the council, but had been completed. He expects to present it next Tuesday, he said.

The committee head said that Colonel Lee had obtained a copy of the proposed draft and had written to him, "threatening" him with suit if he printed the report with any false allegations.

He presented a letter from Colonel Lee in which the latter declared he had received a copy of the "Conclusions and Recommendations" prepared by the committee and had found 75 statements false or misleading.

Schiff asked whether the county council would provide counsel to defend the committee if the report is filed and Frederic P. Lee, president of the council, said the county would support it.

Colonel Lee said last night that he took the records back early in September after he read the proposed report and determined that it was intended to "assassinate my character."

The allegations in the report referred to by Col. Lee involved charges that the housing authority had not operated the projects in accordance with the law in that proper standards were not set up and that records had not been maintained. Col. Lee contended that the records had been in the hands of County Manager Irving G. McNayr from July 1 to early in September and were therefore available to the citizens advisory committee had it wished to avail itself of them.

County Attorney's office lawyers said that legal steps will be taken today to require return of the papers.

An Arlington Negro student is scheduled to start a shop course at the white Washington-Lee High School today—after white students have left the shop room.

Arlington School Superintendent William A. Early said that to his knowledge it is the first time in Virginia that a Negro will have studied at a white public school.

The student is Richard O. Green, 17, of 3508 S. 18th st., Arlington. On Monday he requested a course in auto mechanics not given at the Hoffman-Boston School for Negroes which he attends.

Arlington school officials quickly made arrangements for the course. Behind their haste was a Friday order of the Federal District Court in Alexandria requiring equal school facilities for both white and Negro students in Arlington.

The School Board vice chairman, Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, emphasized that young Green's afternoon shop training at Washington-Lee is only "a temporary arrangement" until permanent facilities can be found.

The School Board originally had planned to set up the auto shop in a corner of the Hoffman-Boston wood shop. But a survey yesterday showed that "there just wasn't any more room" for equipment in the Negro shop, Mrs. Campbell said.

Mrs. Campbell did not think this arrangement would violate a Virginia law which bars teaching of white and Negro pupils together. White students will use the Washington-Lee shop in the morning, the three Negro youths in the afternoon.

Leon Ransom, Washington attorney advising the student's parents, said yesterday he doubts if the Washington-Lee arrangement represents "real equality."

"Even if the boy gets all the facilities there, he still would be getting the isolation treatment," Ransom said. He said he would wait and see if he will take further action.

Meanwhile, the subject of the controversy, young Richard "Archie" Green, seemed calm despite all the attention his request has received.

He said he would "just as soon go to Washington-Lee where they have a complete shop" if he can't get facilities at his own school.

At the same time, Hoffman-Boston Principal S. M. Sydnor said the students had requested another course not previously given—bookkeeping. He said the new course will be taught by the school's present business teacher as soon as textbooks can be secured.

Civic Group to Plan

Plans for the coming year's activities will be discussed at the first meeting of the season of the North Hills of Sligo Civic Association at 8:15 p. m. Wednesday, in the clubhouse of the Sligo Park Golf Course.

Jews Keep Second Day Of New Year

Orthodox and Conservative Jews are keeping the second day of the New Year, 5711, today. Reform Jews observe only the first day.

Yesterday, in a score of synagogues and temples, local Jewry turned out in one of the largest observances of Rosh Hashonoh in recent years. Services started shortly after dawn and lasted into the afternoon.

Prayers for world peace, prosperity of all mankind and individual salvation were offered by the worshippers, while sermons stressed the turbulent conditions facing the world today.

The traditional ram's horn, or shofar, was sounded before, during and after most additional morning prayers.

Last night, most Hebrew families ate apples and other fruit dipped in honey, saying, "May it be Thy will that this year will be happy and sweet for us."

For the 10 days, starting at sundown Monday and ending with Yom Kippur, Jews believe that God passes judgment on each person, and decides whether he shall be inscribed in the book of life or the book of death for the next year. The climax of the religious holiday comes on Yom Kippur, a day a fasting, September 21.

Charges Fly In Maryland Primary Race

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12 (AP).—Maryland's bare-fisted campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor took on added bitterness today with new charges and countercharges.

George P. Mahoney contended the "Baltimore political machine is using its influence with the Governor to control the counties."

And President Thomas P. Healy of the Baltimore Federation of Labor asserted during several platform appearances with Governor Lane that Mahoney pays some of his employes "$30 a week for 60 hours."

He called Mahoney a "screwball who doesn't know how to run his own business." Mahoney is a contractor.

Mahoney, in a television address, described himself as "one man against the political machine."

He asserted that the primary will be "your chance to vote against the powerful Baltimore City political machine."

"This machine is not satisfied with the control of affairs of Baltimore City, but is using its influence with the Governor to gain control of the counties.

"I contend that this is a dangerous, dictatorial form of government."

Once again he charged that, under the Lane administration, "you have been overtaxed and your money has been spent extravagantly and wastefully."

Attorney General Hall Hammond, who is running for reelection without opposition in the primary, told various audiences in Baltimore that he would be "derelict in my duty if I did not tell you that Governor Lane is much better qualified than any of his opponents."

"As attorney general," he said, "I was Mr. Mahoney's legal adviser when he was on the racing commission, and I know whereof I speak."

Tydings Assailed On Red Inquiry

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12 (AP).—John Marshall Butler said tonight that Senator Tydings (D., Md.) "is an essential part" of the national administration "and for that very reason should be defeated in November."

Butler is a candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate.

Once again he criticized Tydings' handling of the Senate investigation of charges that Communists had gained a foothold in the State Department.

Butler declared:

"We are still waiting for what we have a right to expect: Ice cold proof that there are not now and never have been Communists in our State Department. . . ."

Trainmen Indorse Five Candidates

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12 (AP). — The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen today indorsed five Maryland congressional candidates, three of them incumbents.

Indorsed were: Representative Edward A. Garmatz in the third district; Representative George H. Fallon in the fourth; Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer in the fifth; William Boucher III, who is opposing Representative William P. Bolton for the Democratic nomination in the second district, and W. Prescott Allen of Bethesda, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the sixth district seat held by Representative J. Glenn Beall, Republican.

Plumbers Group Backs Mahoney

The Washington Suburban Master Plumbers Association, made up of more than 100 master plumbers in the Montgomery and Prince Georges County areas, yesterday indorsed the candidacy of George P. Mahoney as Democratic candidate for Governor. The indorsement was signed by John Dorsey of Riverdale, president of the association, and C. Leonard Daymude, mayor of Riverdale, past president of the group.

29,000 Pupils Forecast for Montgomery

Montgomery County schools probably will have an enrollment of between 28,000 and 29,000, Superintendent of Schools Edwin W. Broome reported to the County Board of Education meeting in Rockville yesterday.

Accurate figures probably will not be available until next week, Dr. Broome said, since many Jewish children will not report for school until after the Jewish holy days. He said he expects about a 4000 increase in the school population based on preliminary figures.

Dr. Broome said that the Viers Mill elementary school presented probably the worst crowding problem. School officials had expected about 260 and the enrollment already is 402, he said.

Dr. Broome said he would have a better picture of the school situation by the first part of the week. He said that several schools will be on double shift for a short time at least.

The school board accepted the $73,899 bid of Kamp & Heck Co. for construction of the Longview Negro Elementary School at Emory Grove. The bid was for construction of a four-classroom and library addition to the present school.

Morrison Brothers was awarded a contract for construction of an addition to the Kensington Junior High School at a cost of $264,000.

The board approved a request from Richard E. Carpenter, assistant superintendent in charge of construction, that the present Rockville Negro Elementary School building and grounds be transferred to his office for maintenance and storage activities after the new Rockville School is completed.

The board approved purchase of approximately 10 acres of land in the Parkwood subdivision near Saul rd. from Briggs Construction Co. at the rate of $2500 per acre and also approved condemnation of the Irving Fuller tract near Sandy Spring for the site of a consolidated Negro school.

Sealed bids for a 20 classroom fourth unit for the Montgomery Blair High School will be opened October 12 and a two classroom addition to Parkside Elementary School with kitchen facilities will be opened October 5.

Prince Georges Pupils Show 2500 Increase

Preliminary registration figures for Prince Georges County schools show 29,671 pupils attended on opening day.

These figures, released by William S. Schmidt, director of instruction, indicate an increase over 2500 from last year's opening-day attendance of 27,183.

A breakdown shows 16,220 white elementary pupils compared with 14,564 last year; 9336 white high school students compared with 8430; 2661 Negro elementary pupils compared with 2936, and 1454 Negro high school students compared with 1253.

Schmidt attributed the drop in Negro elementary enrollment to the heavy rains and flooded conditions. Some 700 more pupils registered than came to school, he said.

The addition of these 700, plus the normal increase of about 1000 during the month of September, will place the total near the anticipated 31,500, Schmidt predicted.

Admiral Everett is in critical condition at the Oakland (Calif.) Naval Hospital, where he was taken after the head-on collision with another car, the driver of which was killed.

Shimon Phone Call Denied

pena on him last Wednesday at The Plains, Va. Grunewald explained he had been seriously ill, had not read the papers, and therefore was unaware he was being sought.

Grunewald's politics came up apropos of explaining how he was employed as a special investigator to check Pan American telephone wires against wiretapping in 1944-45 and later in 1948-49.

He said Samuel F. Pryor, a vice president of the airline, was a friend of Henry W. Marsh, for whom he (Grunewald) had worked as an investigator for many years. "I went up to New York to talk to them. Marsh was a supporter of Wendell Willkie, and he wanted to talk politics."

Whereupon Grunewald volunteered the information that he was a member of Neely's party.

The witness said he received $750 or $758 from Pan American for checking Pryor's wire the first time. That job, he said, took about two days.

Martin Fay, special committee counsel, commented about the high pay.

Replied Grunewald: "They got plenty of money. I charge 'em."

The second time Grunewald was retained to check Pryor's telephones, the witness said, was a three or four-day job which netted him $1500.

Grunewald said he could not remember exactly when or where he met Shimon.

Senators did not press him on the nature of his transactions with the policemen after they were told it involved a "very sorrowful personal matter" not connected with the current investigation.

Meanwhile, Neely announced he hoped to introduce a measure this week to outlaw wiretapping except on special order of a Federal judge. It is expected to be similar to the New York statute.

Ryan Kin Falls to Death In New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP).—Joseph B. Ryan, 46, owner of a Mont Tremblant, Quebec, ski empire, was killed today in a 22-story fall or jump from a window of the Warwick Hotel.

Mr. Ryan

He was a grandson of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan, multimillionaire and philanthropist, and a cousin of Clendenin J. Ryan, an independent candidate in New York City's special mayoralty election November 7.

The victim of the plunge, the father of five children, was a native of Oak Ridge, Va., and formerly lived in Philadelphia.

He registered at the hotel last night after an automobile trip from Quebec. His pockets contained about $500 in travelers checks, some United States cash and a United States passport.

The body was identified by Alex Stephenson, a friend of the Ryan family. Stephenson said Ryan complained recently of dizzy spells and insomia.

Other sources acquainted with the family said he had suffered financial reverses in the past year.

He was understood to have been trying to sell his Laurentian Mountain ski empire, on which it was estimated he had spent $5,500,000.

Ryan's widow, the former Mary Rutherford of Richmond, Va., was notified at Mont Tremblant of his death and made plans to leave immediately for New York.

Friends here said he had two children by their marriage and three by a former marriage.

He is survived also by two brothers, Thomas Fortune Ryan, III, of Three Rivers, N. Mex., chairman of the board of Mid-Continent Airlines, and William K. Ryan, a Washington, D. C., investor.

Harvey Gibson, Banker, to Be Buried in N. H.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.— A funeral service for Harvey Dow Gibson, 68, president of the Manufacturers Trust Co. of New York, who died on Monday of a heart ailment at the New England Hospital, Boston, Mass., will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Congregational Church in Mr. Gibson's home town of North Conway, N. H.

Mr. Gibson

Internationally known for his Red Cross relief work during two world wars, Mr. Gibson had been president of the Manufacturers Trust since 1931. He was chairman of the board of managers of the New York World's Fair in 1940.

Mr. Gibson achieved success in a wide variety of public and private endeavors. At 34, he became the youngest bank president in New York, and engineered some of the largest financial deals and mergers in the city's banking history. He ran the activities of the Red Cross throughout Europe in World War I and World War II.

In the depths of the depression Mr. Gibson was given the task of raising funds and initiating programs for the relief of the unemployed of New York City. In the first year of the New oYrk World's Fair he was given the helm, pulled the fair out of a financial tangle and gave the bondholders back more than 40 cents on the dollar—money which had appeared to be lost to them.

When World War I broke out, Mr. Gibson was appointed general manager and a member of the war council of the American Red Cross. In 1918 he was named Red Cross Commissioner for France, and a year later for all of Europe.

After the war, Mr. Gibson was named the president of the New York Trust Co. when it was merged with the Liberty Bank.

Mr. Gibson was first married in 1903 to the former Miss Carrie Hastings Curtis, from whom he was divorced in 1925. He was married in 1926 to Mrs. Helen Whitney Bourne, divorced wife of the late George Galt Bourne. Mrs. Gibson survives her husband.

Red Cross Man Tells Of Korean Fighting

Ralph R. Montague, jr., of Birmingham, Ala., the first Red Cross man to reach Korea after the fighting began returned to Washington yesterday with an injured spine suffered while helping carry wounded soldiers from the front.

Montague, attached to the Twenty-first regiment of the Twenty-fourth Division, went to Korea with his outfit on July 2 and for 13 days was the only Red Cross field director in the battle zone. Now there are two or three field directors with each division, Montague said.

His back was injured on July 13 when he was helping evacuate wounded from the Chochiwon area to hospitals 25 miles in the rear. In lifting stretchers onto the train which was to transport them, he re-sprained a vertebra which he had hurt two years previously.

Montague told reporters of being pinned down by enemy fire. He and a chaplain had gone to the front, the chaplain to administer to the wounded and he to give out "comfort" articles—cigarettes, razor blades, soap, etc.—when an attack started.

He told how a starved out infantryman, with whom he shared a foxhole for the 25 minutes the barrage was on, asked, "My God, what the hell are you guys doing up here?"

After he hurt his back, Montague returned to Camp Wood on Kyushu Island, Japan, where he was kept busy setting up a program for the wives of the men of the Twenty-first Infantry. The regiment had been stationed at Camp Wood prior to being shipped to Korea.

The Women's Volunteer Association was organized to "keep their minds occupied" while waiting for news of their husbands, Montague said. A motor pool was established which furnished cars and drivers for the post, stenographic help was supplied and a weekly newspaper was put out by the women which gave the news of the camp to the men in combat.

Montague said that the Reds seem to be deliberately trying to kill the medics in order to "demoralize" the American troops. He said that before ambulances were driven to the front mud was smeared over the sides obliterating the Red Cross insignia.

Montague has been with the Red Cross for seven years. He was with the Tenth Armored Division in Europe during World War II and was a soldier in Europe during World War II.

The amendment also prohibits carrying lighted cigars, cigarettes, or pipe or lighting of a match on the driveway of a station where gasoline is dispensed and requires that motors be shut off while fueling is in progress. An annual license must be obtained from the fire marshal for handling gasoline or inflammable liquids.

Group Urges Utilities Chief For Arlington

The employment of a public utilities supervisor for Arlington County was urged in a resolution by the Arlington County Civic Federation last night.

The request calls upon the county board to reconsider action taken last Saturday when a similar proposal was voted down 3-2.

The Federation acted on a resolution offered by Laurence S. Knappen, chairman of its committee on public utilities, who declared that the salary range for the position would be between $5000 and $7500. This range is set by the county public utilities commission, he said.

The unsuccessful board motion Saturday set a salary of $7000.

The meeting was held at the Lyon Park Community House.

U. S. Workers Promised Aid For Raise if Prices Keep Rising

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12 (Spl.). Cheering delegates of the National Federation of Government Employes today hear Senator Olin D. Johnson (D., S. C.) say he'll work for a new Federal employe pay raise if living costs keep going up.

Chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee, which would handle pay raises, Johnson told the delegates to the twentieth biennial convention that wages are already lagging behind living cost increases.

He said he will introduce pay raise legislation next year "unless something is done immediately to prevent any further increase in prices."

Cheers also greeted Johnston's promise to fight for a reduction in retirement age for Government employes.

"A loyal and faithful Government employe shouldn't have to wait until he or she is 60 to retire," he declared. "Our civil service should permit retirement after 30 years of service, regardless of the employe's age."

At another point, Johnston bluntly declared that this Nation should "carry the fight to the very center of Communist aggression, Russia itself," and should not hesitate to use the atom bomb.

Johnston also declared: "I object to so many billions of dollars poured into Europe, down foreign drains and rat holes, when we need so many billions of dollars right here. I fear these benevolences will come back as cold steel into the hearts of our boys."

Johnston expressed support of a permanent loyalty law for Federal employes. The convention is expected to come out in favor of such a law before the meetings end.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mother and Daughter, Educated Gentlewomen, Feel Adrift, Cut Off From Society, Since the Husband And Father Died; He Always Was the Family Head

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Maybe you'll think we're neurotic; perhaps we are. But at times it seems as if there is just no place for us in the world. Mother is 57, I am 28. We have no close kin and only one or two semi-close friends. As you can tell, we are really introverts, partly from inclination, partly from circumstances.

We both have serious heart trouble. The first four of the last nine years I was seriously ill, then convalescent for two years, and since then I've had fair health. Mother's heart has never been good, and in recent months it has got much worse.

We live in a village and together hold a job nearby, for which we are paid $20 a week. We couldn't manage except that Mother has a trust income of $30 a month. Our house is old and very large, set in an acre of ground; and, to escape the burden of its upkeep, we have thought of selling, but wouldn't know where to go. We have some furniture of sentimental value and three cats whom we dearly love, and we'd want to take these with us.

WE HAD ALMOST decided to move to a city apartment, if we could find one, where we could be close to everything and be able to keep the things that matter most. But now, with the Korean war and the constant threat of the atom bomb, it seems foolhardy to move to a coastal city when we've always lived in the country. So we are stymied. When Father was alive, he made all our decisions for us, which leaves us all the more adrift now. I don't dare think on our problem too much, as I get sort of panicky, feeling that maybe there is no solution.

We are both fairly nice looking and quite well educated. But our clothes are shabby, our diet unbalanced and, worst of all, we never get our domestic chores done. Now, with Mother more ill, things are bound to get worse, and it seems a shame to drudge our whole lives away in this routine. Please, can you help us? F. R.

DEAR F. R.: There is something out of this world about the picture you portray. Your letter, here cut in half, reads like a plot by Nathaniel Hawthorne about a fine family in genteel decay. You are joined to circumstances that could defeat a mediocre character, but fortunately you seem better than that.

The insight and objectivity you bring to your problem are expressive of good intelligence, a game spirit and a true sense of reality. You inherited good genes from some ancestor. And maybe that heart condition of yours is basically a psychomatic disturbance caused by frustration and anxiety, that would clear up if you could broaden your interests, affiliate with young people, escape somewhat from the filial relationship and get more joy out of being alive.

In favorable surroundings you'd probably be a vital personality; and even here you aren't doing too badly, as witness your bold enterprise in reaching completely outside the situation for help in planning a rescue program. With this much initiative carried on through, you can avoid withering away in obscurity, I am sure.

With your fondness for cats, maybe you or your mother wouldn't consider providing foster-home care for children who are wards of the court, or otherwise candidates for good proxy mothering. But if you would consider the job, and could qualify to handle it, your set-up seems ideal for the purpose, and it is a means of making a subsidy income—possibly sufficient to cover some hired help. Also the experience of living with children, if accepted wholeheartedly, should modify your introvert tendencies and divert your thoughts into healthier channels.

However, before making any change, you should discuss your situation in detail with the director of the family service agency in the county-seat town that is located about 20 miles from your village. After comparing the atlas with a social service directory, I think this town affords the nearest counsellor help of that kind. And if the agency there doesn't cover your territory, at least the staff will lend a hand in bringing about the right introductions.

You need a confidante over a period of time, to relieve your anxiety, sustain your courage and guide your planning. And the family service agencies all over the continent are well organized and willing to provide that type of aid to worried householders like you who bid for it. M. H.

For Marvelous Spiced Peaches— Clip This Recipe

It's from the file of Mrs. B. Allabach

7 lbs. peaches
4 lbs. Franklin Old Fashioned Brown Sugar

Pack peaches into hot sterilized jars. Boil syrup until thick; then pour over fruit while boiling hot. Cover with hot sterilized caps and seal immediately. Makes 7 pints. Big Guns Sound on D. C. Party Front

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

WARS MAY RAGE and governments may topple. But only in Washington, where nothing is so constant as change, does the party pace maintain its status quo.

Before the leaves have turned, the town's big guns have sounded off on the party front. Departing diplomats, arriving dignitaries, the orange-blossom set, all are sharing in the week's passing show.

MAJ. GEN. C. C. J. FORSLEV, Military and Air Attache at the Danish Embassy, and Rear Admiral Erhard Jorgen Carl Qvistgaard, Naval Attache, are leaving Washington soon to take over new duties in their homeland. The general will become Chief of Staff of the Danish Air Force, and Admiral Qvistgaard will be Chief of Defense.

Yesterday the Admiral and the General and their wives joined forces and gave a cocktail party at the Army Navy Country Club to say farewell to several hundred friends.

From 6 to 8 o'clock guests were received in the large hall of the club. In the gathering were the Ambassador of Denmark and Mme. de Kauffmann; the Ambassador of Sweden, Erik Boheman, the Minister of Iceland, Thor Thors; Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Paul Ely; Capt. and Mrs. Floyd F. Ferris; Rear Admiral and Mrs. James E. Foskett, and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Harry Armstrong.

Associate Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark gave a small cocktail party yesterday at their home for Miss Barbara Stewart and her fiance, Thomas Eskey. Miss Stewart is the daughter of Mrs. Grace M. Stewart, executive secretary to Attorney General McGrath.

THE MEXICAN AMBASSADOR, Rafael de la Colina, was host at a luncheon "for men only" yesterday at the embassy, in honor of Herbert Gaston, president of the Export-Import Bank.

Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr., was among the guests and the group also included Export-Import Bank officials: Elmer Chase, Chief of the Examining Division; Lynn Stambaugh, member of the board; Arthur Anderson, assistant to Mr. Gaston; Sidney Sherwood, secretary; Bernard Bell, chief of the Economics Division; John D. Fitch, chief of the Engineering Division; Walter C. Sauer, vice president; W. D. Whittemore, vice president and treasurer.

Also guests were Charles S. Murphy and George M. Elsey, special assistants to President Truman; Roy Rubottom and Thomas C. Mann of the State Department.

For their services as economic advisers to the Embassy of Thailand, Serge Rips and Isador G. Alk were honored last evening at a buffet dinner party given by the Ambassador and Princess Wan Waithayakon.

The Order of the White Elephant, grade of Knight Commander, a decoration bestowed on Mr. Rips by His Majesty, Phumiphon Aduldet, King of Thailand, was presented to Mr. Rips during dinner by the Ambassador, Prince Wan Waithayakon.

Mr. Alk was also decorated by the Ambassador, and received the Order of the Crown from the King.

SHEIKH ASAD AL-FAQIH, Ambassador of Saudi-Arabia, entertained Monday evening at a buffet dinner party for newly appointed U. S. Ambassador of Saudi-Arabia, Raymond A. Hare, and Mrs. Hare. It is a custom in Saudi-Arabia for wives to absent themselves from official functions, but as Monday's dinner was small and informal, Mme Al-Faqih presided as hostess.

According to another custom, neither cocktails nor liquors were served at the dinner. A menu of typical Arab dishes included a whole roast lamb elaborately decorated and served with spiced rice.

Ambassador and Mrs. Hare will leave next week for Jiddah.

ALONG EMBASSY ROW

THE DEAN OF THE CORPS, Ambassador Wilhelm Munthe Morgenstierne, and Mme. Munthe Morgenstierne sailed yesterday from Norway with their two daughters, Marjorie and Solveig. They will arrive at the embassy here on the 21st.

THE AMBASSADOR OF PAKISTAN, M. A. H. Ispahani, left Monday for New York to meet the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Sir Mohammad Zafrulla Khan, who is arriving in the United States to attend sessions of the United Nations General Assembly. Ambassador Ispahani will return to Washington at the end of the week.

Sahibzada H. A. Abbasi has joined the staff of the Pakistan Embassy as a Third Secretary. His family will follow in three or four weeks.

SENORA DE OLIVA VELEZ, fair-haired sister of the Argentine Ambassador Jeronimo Remorino, is just 26, and she has five children. "She is a good example," the Ambassador once said, "but not for me." The children were left at home in Buenos Aires while the Senora and her husband, Dr. Oliver Velez, visit here for a month or so. They plan to make the embassy in Washington their headquarters and take occasional trips north and southwest.

Adequate Vitamins Needed for Beauty

(Eleventh day of Margaret's two weeks' beauty program.)

By Ann Lawrence

AS a college girl, your dietary habits are subject to no supervision but your own.

There's something about dormitory life that is most conducive to between-meal feasts of fudge and marshmallow cookies, of soft drinks and candy bars. And there's that morning when you'll never make your 8 o'clock if you stop for breakfast. There's the temptation to skip the well-planned meals provided by the school's dining hall and just run over to the Campus Shoppe for a snack.

So what? Well, without the proper vitamin supply, many things can happen. Without enough vitamin A your skin becomes extremely rough and dry; your hair gets brittle and loses its lustre; your nails break easily.

Vitamin C deficiency can cause small eruptions of the skin, as well as patchy areas of vague darkened color. Another characteristic of C shortage is the tendency to bruise easily.

Then there's that little matter of excess weight. Do you know the caloric difference between a raw apple and one ounce of potato chips? There are approximately one hundred more calories in the ounce of chips.

TAKE this little quiz and see how well you'll do with your own diet:

1. What colors usually indicate good vitamin A values in vegetables?
2. Are the vitamins you buy in a drug store the same as those you obtain in foods?
3. Which has the most calories, a glass of orange juice or a glass of cola-type drink?
4. If it is difficult for you to find your seat in a darkened theater, what vitamin deficiency is indicated?
5. Why is it recommended that at least one raw fruit or vegetable be eaten every day?
6. If you were trying to crack down on calories to lose weight and just had to have a piece of candy, which should you eat, a piece of fudge or a chocolate mint?

ANSWERS:

1. Green and yellow. 2. Yes, except that the foods may provide other vitamins than the one concentrate you buy. 3. They are equal in caloric content, but the cola-drink adds sugar to your diet, while the one glass of orange juice provides you a full day's supply of vitamin C. 4. Vitamin A. 5. Because of vitamin C content which is easily destroyed in cooking. 6. The chocolate wafer-mint has approximately 34 calories; the one-inch cube of fudge, 119.

Window Which Gives No Light or Air Might as Well Be Covered Up Entirely

IS THERE a window bothering you? T. W. N., who has one she would like to nominate for oblivion, writes as follows:

DEAR ANNE:

One window in our house is nothing but a nuisance! It isn't necessary for light and air, doesn't give much anyway as it opens on a grubby little alley. It is at such a height that passers-by can look right in, especially at night when shades aren't drawn. Have you any suggestions for covering it over—short of actually building up the wall? T. W. N., Arlington.

You could simply fill in the window area with wall board and add shelving. Paint the shelf hollows a darker shade than the surrounding area, if you like, for attractive contrast. Make edges to match wall.

Another idea would be to curtain over the window and surrounding wall with some concealing and attractive fabric. You could even cover the whole wall. Furniture can then be arranged against the draped wall.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to make Banbury Tarts, an English pastry? B. G., Hyattsville, Md.

The recipe for this flaky specialty from the Banbury Cross region near London appears in the new "Betty Crocker Picture Cook Book," which recently reached my desk.

BANBURY TARTS

Make Flaky Pastry by rolling Plain Pastry ⅛ inch thick and dotting it with firm butter. Use 1 tablespoon butter to each cup flour in your pastry recipe (in addition to fat included in recipe.) After dotting pastry with butter, fold over from the sides several times to make small square and roll out again. Cut in 4 inch squares.

For the filling, wash in warm water ½ cup seeded raisins. Chop raisins and stir in ½ cup sugar, 1½ tablespoons fine cracker crumbs, 1 egg yolk, ½ tablespoon butter, melted, dash of salt, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind, and 2 tablespoons chopped walnuts.

Spread filling over half of each square. Moisten edges, fold into triangles, and seal. Prick tops. Bake at 450° (hot oven) until delicately browned (12 to 15 minutes.)

DEAR ANNE:

Our laundress scorched a linen table cloth when she was last here. Can you tell me how I can remove the scorch without harming the linen? P. T., Alexandria, Va.

Here's a good trick to remember in regard to scorched linen: Cut a raw onion in half and rub the flat side on the stain. Soak the fabric for several hours in cold water, then launder in warm soapsuds. This usually removes the spot.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you tell me how I could get in touch with a cooperative canning group either here in Arlington or in Washington? I understand that there is one in Georgetown on Wisconsin ave., but I do not know the exact address. I should prefer one in Arlington as it would, of course, be more convenient for me.

Lois F. Parks, 3221 12th st., S. Arlington, Va.

The canning center out on Wisconsin ave. was discontinued a couple of years ago. The nearest one I know of now is at the Herndon, Va., High School. This is open to people from neighboring communities. You have to make reservations in advance by calling the school.

DEAR ANNE:

I carelessly left my electric iron laying on a piece of rayon and it stuck fast to my iron. Please tell me how to remove the remains.

Eleanor B., Washington.

Try rubbing the iron across table salt on waxed paper, then rubbing with a damp cloth. If more drastic steps are required, use a fine mild scouring powder on the cold iron, then wipe with a damp cloth. Running slightly warm iron over wax paper or rubbing with paraffin afterward will give smoother surface.

DEAR ANNE:

My mattress, pillows, davenport and chair, none of which are a year old, have already begun to smell like mildew. I can manage to keep my clothes free of it, but what can one do about articles of upholstered furniture?

L. B., Havelock, N. C.

Once cool weather sets in and the heat is turned on, I believe you'll note that this musti-ness has disappeared. Meantime, one of the deodorant sprays sold in the housewares sections of department stores might be helpful in masking the odor. Ask about them when next you are in a large store. It's extremely hard to keep down mildews and the resulting odors if the climate is damp. Sunning and airing as often as possible in summertime does help some.

$250,000 Trailed

Army Major Held for Funds Quiz

RENO, Sept. 12 (AP).—A handsome Army major—located at an isolated ranch—was jailed today for questioning about alleged misapplication of more than $250,000 in Germany.

Banning

The Army identified him as Maj. Harold Dean Banning, 39, a finance officer in a Berlin Army post. He is here on 60-day leave and, he said, to divorce his wife, Willie Lee Ramsey Banning, formerly of Arkansas. She remained in Germany.

Dressed nattily in civilian clothes, Banning firmly denied he had stolen anything or absconded with any funds.

The United States command in Germany had asked Washington to find and question Banning about "certain alleged irregularities in financial matters."

Banning told Army agents and sheriff's deputies he had $100,000 when he arrived in the United States by commercial plane August 25. He declared it was money he had saved—"my own personal fund and it has nothing to do with the Army."

(In San Francisco, Army sources said Banning had been an officer a little over 18 years, which would make his base pay as major $484.50 a month. The sources said additions for subsistence and quarters might bring the sum up to approximately $630.)

The ranch where Banning was found caters to men and women establishing six weeks Nevada residence for divorce.

As the jailer searched him, the suave major looked at the main lockup cell and remarked:

"You don't mean you are going to throw me in there with all those characters. The Army should provide for me—I haven't killed anybody, stolen anything or absconded with any funds."

He was locked in a separate cell.

Banning had bank books showing deposits of $70,000 and $252 cash. Banning had bought a creamy yellow 1950 club coupe since coming to Reno September 1.

Stafford School Bids of $583,000 17% Over Estimate

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Low bids on the long-planned central high school for Stafford County totalled $583,000, or about 17 percent more than was expected, School Superintendent T. Benton Gayle announced today.

The School Board and the Board of Supervisors have asked Architec Samuel B. Mayo of Richmond, and the Motely Construction Co. of Farmville, the low bidder on the major construction phase, to prepare modifications to bring the cost in line.

The modifications will be reported to the two boards in a public meeting next month. Gayle said he felts the bids were low in view of the fact recent bids on two school projects were more than 50 percent above the expected cost.

Child Development Report Prepared

A report on all phases of child development, prepared for the Midcentury White House Conference, will be reviewed at a meting here today of the national committee for the conference, Oscar R. Ewing, chairman of the national committe, announced yesterday.

Compiled by more than 100 experts on the subject, the report will be presented to the conference meetings here in December, and will later be reprinted for popular use. A special conference committee on religion, will also meet here today.

Community Chest Goal Is $38,000 in Fairfax

Fairfax County's Community Chest has set a goal of $38,000 for the annual campaign to be launched early in October, Campaign Chairman Joseph H. Freehill said yesterday.

Freehill also announced the appointment of George Stewart, executive director of the chest, as its campaign manager; Theodore Powell, executive director of Metropolitan Area Boy Scouts, as assistant campaign manager, and Mrs. Louise Engle, of the Community Chest staff, as director of public relations for the drive.

Arlington Jail Staff To Undergo Training

Arlington County's jail personnel will take a one-week training program beginning Monday in such subjects as jail administration, methods of escape, classification of prisoners and admitting procedures.

Sheriff J. Elwood Clements said the jail workers will attend classes in the Federal Bureau of Prisons building in Washington and will tour area jails.

Arlington Group Backs Large Swimming Pools

The board of directors of Arlington's Chamber of Commerce said yesterday that if a recent $500,000 bond issue for county swimming pools is found legal, the chamber favors construction of several large pools rather than more small ones.

Arlington County Treasurer John Locke Green has filed suit to block execution of the bonds—approved by voters in an August referendum. The chamber statement said construction of several large swimming pools will "effect the best operating economy."

Anti-Red Drive Hits 'Singing Lady'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

IREENE WICKER, whose "Singing Lady" radio show was dropped by her sponsor after her name was linked with pro-Red groups in the pamphlet, Red Channels, yesterday said she was considering possible legal action. Two other performers, Gypsy Rose Lee and Jean Muir, also have been listed in the pamphlet. Miss Muir was dropped from her show, and an American Legion official has asked the American Broadcasting System to note that Miss Lee is named in the publication

Four Arrested In 4-Minute Gambling Raid

Within four minutes yesterday afternoon, marked money went from the hands of a police undercover agent through four other pairs of hands, including those of a "numbers pickup man" and four persons were under arrest.

The undercover agent, armed with a commissioner's warrant, made his "play" at 14 M st. ne. and then arrested Julia Lewis, 42, of 1900 Rosedale st. ne.; Otis Jones, 21, of 411 E st. ne.; Bertha Thomas, 50, of 14 M st. ne.; and Gussie M. Jackson, of 411 E st. ne., who had sent the money along.

Police said they found $258 in change on a table at the M st. house.

The four were charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips and released on $1500 bond for a hearing today.

In an 11:20 a. m. raid yesterday, police arrested Bennie Denniberg, 40, of 1336 Missouri ave. and Anthony Kirby, 44, of 2827 Georgia ave. nw. on a commissioner's warrant after they made a play using marked money at the Georgia ave. address. The two men were charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

E. Finkenstaedt Named Chairman Of Cathedral Fund

Edward R. Finkenstaedt, member of the investment firm of Auchincloss, Parker and Redpath, has been appointed national chairman of the Washington Cathedral 1950-51 building and maintenance funds, it was announced yesterday by the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington.

The campaign will open on a nation-wide basis October 9, with a goal of $500,000, Bishop Dun said.

Finkenstaedt has long been linked with the Cathedral through his participation in many church activities. He has also served on Community Chest and Red Cross campaign committees. He was president of the National Symphony Orchestra society for five years.

3 Stars for Bradley Approved by Senate

The Senate last night voted unanimous approval of a bill to give the five-star rank of General of the Army to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The action came over the shouted objections of Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.), who said he favored the purpose of the bill, but opposed jamming it through out of regular order.

The measure now goes to the House.

Glaucoma Is Common Ailment

Traffic Accident Discloses Eye Ailment

(This is the third in a series of six articles in which Miss Barrington describes the progress made in the treatment of the blind and deaf. The articles have been read and approved by Dr. Marvin Fisher Jones, surgical director of the department of otolaryngology, Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, and Fred Heffinger, superintendent of that hospital.)

By Kay Barrington

CHAPTER THREE

For years, Helen's eyes had bothered her. She had "spells" of pain and discomfort, often blurry vision. It never occurred to Helen that she was suffering from an eye ailment that glasses could not correct.

One day, hurrying to an appointment, she darted across a busy street. Helen awoke in a hospital. Her "side-vision" had failed so badly that she couldn't see an approaching bus. An eye specialist looked for the answer and found it.

Helen had glaucoma. Within a few months she would have been needlessly blind. It was, in a sense, lucky for Helen that she had been hit by a bus she couldn't see. She was only one of the 800,000 Americans suffering from this disease. Its commonest victims are between the ages of 37 and 70. More women are afflicted than men.

Symptoms You Can Check

Glaucoma is an ailment marked by increased tension in the eyeball, sometimes very sudden, an eye specialist told me. This results from an upset between the amount of fluid entering and leaving the eye.

What are its symptoms?

Victims see halos around lights; they have trouble walking in poorly lighted places; frequently they have headaches behind the eyes on awakening.

As the tension increases, pressure falls on the nerves which conduct the vision to the brain. Diagnosis and prompt treatment are of the greatest importance. For continued pressure will destroy these nerves. Once dead, they will never regain their function.

Blindness is often the eventual effect. Now, thanks to modern medical research, the pressure can be controlled by use of carefully chosen eye drops. In Helen's case, surgery was necessary to save her sight. She had waited too long. The nerves of her eyes were being destroyed.

In 1942, the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital established a glaucoma clinic with the assistance and under the sponsorship of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. The clinic's chief purpose is to conserve the vision of patients suffering from glaucoma in its early stages.

Such patients are usually referred for special treatment from general eye clinics. The New York clinic serves as a center for student and practicing ophthalmologists from all over the world.

Fundless Cases Aided

Helen was lucky in another way; she had the money to pay for her operation and hospital care.

Arthur's case was not so simple. Failing sight cost him his job. At 64, he had little hope of finding another one. Alone and without money, he faced the hopeless prospect of spending his declining years in blindness and poverty.

In desperation, he decided to go to an eye specialist. The doctor diagnosed cataracts.

"Why didn't you come to me before?" the doctor asked. "We'll have to take you to the hospital and have these cataracts removed."

Arthur stared out the window. "I could never afford an operation like that," he said numbly.

And he was right. Under ordinary circumstances, such a delicate operation, plus the hospital care and the cost of recuperation would have been out of the question.

But Arthur's first talk with the social worker at the hospital ended his doubt. She explained very simply just what had to be done.

Arthur was admitted for the operation without cost. When he returned home, Social Service saw to it that a housekeeper was sent from the Department of Welfare. A woman from the Lighthouse was called in to read to him.

The dark hours sped by, and finally the doctor said he was ready for glasses. Arthur did not have to worry about this expense, either, for the glasses were provided free. When he had completely recovered, Social Service referred him to the State Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation. Now Arthur is independent, self-supporting and able to see.

Cause of Cataracts

Cataracts cause more blindness among older people than any other eye disease. Any "cloudiness" of the lens of the eye is called a cataract.

Congenital cataracts, fairly common, almost never appreciably interfere with vision. However, a severe illness of the mother during pregnancy at the time the lens of the unborn child is being formed can cause the entire baby lens to become cloudy. An example is German measles contracted by the mother during the first three months of pregnancy.

Cataracts occurring after birth may be due to severe infection in the eye or elsewhere in the body, blows or cuts injuring the lens, or—the commonest cause among older people—the process of aging. The only treatment is to remove the cloudy lens.

In the process of seeing, each eye acts as a camera focusing objects on the retina. The object seen by each eye is transported to the brain through the optic nerve. There fusion takes place and objects are localized.

In recent years great progress has been made in the treatment of diseases affecting the important portion of the eye situated behind the lens . . . the inner globe.

Here lies the retina which must be correctly located and in good functional condition so that rays of light focused on it may be carried to the brain. Disease or injury to the eye may cause a condition called a "detached retina." When this occurs, the retina is pushed forward making the focusing apparatus completely unable to bring objects to a clear focus on the retina.

Battle Against Blindness

To correct this condition, the damaged portion of the retina must be replaced in its proper position. This is done by a delicate operation which consists of inserting very fine steel pins through the outer coats of the eyeball, thereby setting up a gentle inflammation which in effect glues the retina back in place.

Because this operation is so delicate, it requires a much longer stay in the hospital than is necessary for most eye surgery.

In general, through public education, improved public health, new drugs and surgical techniques, better equipped eye hospitals, and an increasing number of eye specialists, the battle against blindness is steadily being won.

Television, That Is

Edwards Says He Saw It All Coming

By John Crosby

Edwards

IF YOU'VE NEVER heard Ralph Edwards' "Truth Or Consequences," which seems inconceivable, you must at least have heard some nasty rumors about the granddaddy of give-away shows, all of them true. The latest and nastiest rumor of all is that "Truth Or Consequences" has taken to television. I'm afraid the latest rumor is true, too. I got witnesses.

In girding his loins for this latest assault on my sensibilities, Edward declared: "From the time the show first went on the air over 10 years ago, we knew we had a number one television show, but we also knew that it could not be simulcast. On the air for 10 years we have aimed our stunts at a listening audience and thrown out stunt after stunt because it was too visual. These stunts were filed against the day of television."

ALTOGETHER, that's an extraordinary statement designed to show what an astute student of show business Edwards is, and the fact that there isn't a great deal of truth in the statement could only be caviled at by people who go around caviling at everything. Me, for instance. Edwards' device for aiming a stunt at a listening, as opposed to a visual, audience consisted generally of dunking some innocent into a tank of water (splash) throwing a pie in his face (squish) or making him kiss a cow under the illusion that it is a pretty girl (moo). As any fool can readily see, these are primarily auditory stunts, not conducive to a visual or television audience.

Well, I was right there, pencil in hand, to see how well Mr. Edwards had converted himself to visibility. On his first TV show a blindfolded man was persuaded to kiss a cow under the illusion that it was a pretty girl. No, no pies in the face yet. But then this is only the first show.

The main stunt of the evening consisted of dressing a lot of outlandish contestants in outlandish costumes and perpetrating then on an audience full of dance lovers in another auditorium as a serious dance group. This must have been one of the stunts that Edwards had lying around in his files waiting for television. Probably waiting since 1942, when Edwards pulled a similar stunt on a bunch of music lovers at Town Hall in New York, introducing a housewife from New Jersey who had never touched a violin as the "distinguished European concert violinist, Yifnuff."

I'M AFRAID I can't agree that "Truth or Consequences" is a natural for television. The radio version, which is still on the air, was the ultimate in silliness, but, at least, it was decently veiled. Its television counterpart is a monstrosity of vulgarity. It reminded me strongly of Bedlam, the first English lunatic asylum, whose inmates provided amusement to throngs of spectators.

The visible Edwards is a pop-eyed gentleman with a wolfish grin who acts and even looks a little like a maniacal Bob Hope. The participants are indescribable except to someone with the gifts and the space of Charles Dickens. Their appearances are not helped much by the fact that this horrible operation is on kinescope, which is murky enough to malign them and not quite dark enough to obscure them entirely.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Maybe It's Funnier On Television

Best story I encountered during my vacation was told me by Paul Hodges, top star on the Taft television station in Cincinnati.

It's about the fellow who hates baseball, and complains to his psychiatrist: "Doc, every night when I go to sleep I dream I'm a big league ballplayer, slugging the ball to all corners of the lot, and running out doubles and triples and even inside-the-park homers. You've got to help me. I'm worn out."

"Hmmmm," said the doctor, "I think I have the solution. Tonight, before you go to sleep, think about race horses. Read the results of today's races, and the entries for tomorrow—and when you go to sleep, you'll dream about horses instead of baseball."

"What," snapped the patient, "and lose my turn at bat?"

CLUB NEWS

The District Line Club will meet tonight at 8, Petworth Library, Georgia ave. and Upshur st. nw. Program highlight will be a Quiz Show (complete with appropriate prizes) and you're all welcome to attend. I'm going to serve as judge, and if any of the contestants have any idea of bribing me they might as well know in advance that my price is an ice cream soda.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Portable typewriter, works fine; table model radio, works." (Adams 5512 after 7 a. m.)

"Four cute, housebroken 7-week-old kittens." (North 8588.)

"Five lovely 5-week-old kittens, darling pets." (Metropolitan 1896.)

"Black-and-tan 4-month-old pup." (Franklin 1971 after 6 p. m.)

"Very pretty dog, mixture of cocker and collie." (Warfield 0663.)

"Two adorable, well-trained 8-week-old kittens." (Ordway 3421.)

"Forced to give up 5-year-old Scottie-type dog." (Warfield 2790.)

"Four kittens with personalities." (Wisconsin 4647.)

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Don Garrett of 4334 N. Fairfax dr., Arlington, Va., reports that while vacationing in Monticello, Fla., he saw a sign reading:

"If you're not in favor of our form of Government, boats leave for Europe every day."

Yeah, but what puzzles me is that so many of these birds who can't stand our way of doing things are so reluctant to get on one of those boats.

Incidentally, speaking of signs, there's also a pretty good one at the entrance to a cemetery near Bridgeton, N. J. It says:

"Drive Carefully. We Can Wait."

PROGRESS REPORT

Senator Estes Kefauver has introduced a bill to authorize the Government to pay $10,000 to Dorothy Kilmer, as compensation for the negligence of the District policeman whose accidentally fired revolver crippled her for life.

The Tennessee scrapper is going to give the measure all the push he can, but he concedes it doesn't have much chance at this session.

As they say on the Hill, a private bill of this sort "has got to grow some whiskers" before it can get a hearing.

So Dorothy will have to be patient, and try again next year. Meantime, even if she gets the money at long last, I'd like to know how an unemployable paraplegic is supposed to support herself for life on $10,000. Wouldn't a small pension make more sense?

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Let me be the first to ask for your mother's recipe for that potato kuegel and wiener-schnitzel you raved about while you were on vacation.

Mrs. L. M. Betts,
3804 Ingomar st.
Chevy Chase, Md.

Dear Mrs. Betts:

You're the second, not the first. My wife was first, some 17 years ago—to no avail. Cracking the Japanese code during the late war was as nothing compared to getting my mother to turn loose one of her recipes.

Personally, though, I don't think the secret is in the recipe at all. You see, she's a taster. She never eats, she just "tastes" as she cooks, and I think that's what does it. Bill.

VACATION ECHOES

My pet peeve during my recent trip was greedy waiters. Example: Give the guy a $10 bill in payment of a $4.25 check and he'd bring you four singles and $1.75 in silver.

One of the nicest things about coming back to Washington is you don't have to worry about parking your car on the street at night. Mine was less than 300 yards from the brightly lighted Stevens Hotel one evening when a neighborly Chicago cop suggested:

"I wouldn't leave it there overnight, mister. They'd probably strip it."

RETURN

Except for the fact we aren't allowed to have pets in our apartment, Mary Ellen—also just back from vacation—sums up her own sentiments and mine with:

The weatherman fixed it
So no one could say,
"We had our best weather
While you were away."
How pleasant the welcome,
The neighborly chat;
How welcome the pillow,
How happy the cat.

SUCCESS STORY

Overheard in Stouffer's, in Detroit: "Our liquidation sale was so successful we decided to stay in business."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

'Deal' Behind Hanley Campaign

By Drew Pearson

Here are the details of the secret deal which Dewey forces made with Lieut. Gov. Joe Hanley to get him to withdraw from the New York race for governor.

Hanley

In case Hanley loses in his race for the Senate against Herbert Lehman, a new job will be created for him on the Throughway Commission — the superhighway now under construction across New York State. This job will pay Hanley $25,000 annually.

In addition, Hanley has been promised $15,000 income from an oil company, making a total of $40,000, or about the income he would have received had he been elected governor.

Finally, friends in the Dewey camp have promised to repay the $30,000 which Kingsland Macy, Frank Gannett and Norman Gould had put up to pay off Hanley's debts. The lieutenant governor had been in difficult financial circumstances and the Macy-Gannett-Gould backers had raised about $30,000 to bail him out.

Rival TV Stars

In the delegates' lounge at Lake Success, a newsman said to Security Council President Sir Gladwyn Jebb, "How does it feel to be a TV idol?"

"It's really quite frightening," replied Jebb. "People come up to me on the street and shake my hand. No member of the British Foreign Office is supposed to be known, not to mention being popular."

"I'm afraid you can't escape it," insisted the newsman. "People are fascinated by you — second only to Milton Berle"

"Berle?" said Sir Gladwyn. "Who's he? The only Berle I know is Adolf Berle, and people aren't fascinated by him."

Down the Drain

It is easy to understand why the Republican Policy Committee took the unusual step of rushing out with a disavowal of Senator Schoeppel, the bumbling Senator from Kansas, after he tried to smear the red brush on Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman.

Chapman's forthright and convincing reply boomeranged against the Republicans badly. Bob Allen expressed it best of all, after Chapman had wound up his testimony.

"I have no money to leave my family," the cabinet officer said, "Only my good name and reputation. By the grace of God I'm going to protect it.

"I challenge him . . . I dare you to remove your cloak of immunity and sit in this chair and read your statement."

Senator Schoeppel remained silent.

"Do you care to answer?" Chairman O'Mahoney of Wyoming asked.

Senator Schoeppel did not.

"Don't you care to question the witness?" invited O'Mahoney.

Schoeppel mumbled something about the fact that his assistant, Frank Bow, who actually prepared his speech, was out of town.

Whereupon Bob Allen, sitting at the press table, announced in a loud stage whisper:

Lewis Tactics Hit by NLRB

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ruled that John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers cannot use a "front" man to get board benefits without complying to NLRB regulations.

The five-man board, in unanimous decision, dismissed the petition of Albin Becker, a miner at the Knife River Coal Mining Co., Beulah, N. Dak., who had asked for an election to unseat Local 1101 of the Progressive Mine Workers as the bargaining agents for the company's 130 employes.

The Progressive Mine Workers, a biter rival organization of the United Mine Workers, charged that Becker was merely a "front" for the UMW, which is barred from asking for NLRB elections because the UMW has refused to comply with the non-Communist oath requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The board said that according to the "credible testimony" in the record, Becker was a member of the UMW, had signed a blank decertification petition handed to him by a UMW official, and that when the hearing was held, Becker was represented by an attorney he had not hired and had no intention of paying.
